PACKARD'S

Regulator and Reproducer

OF THE HUMAN HAIR.

It is no humbug, but, if used according to the directions, will reproduce hair on bald spots, will never fail to restore the falling off, will keep the hair what it is, will, in all cases, turn gray hair to its color, and reconstitute it in its former softness and beauty. It will invigorate the hair, and give new life to what has become stunted. It will remove all scurf, dandruff and unpleasant influences, and prevent the hair from falling out. For sale by

It is no humbug, but, if used according to the directions, will reproduce hair on bald spots, will never fail to restore the
falling off, will keep the hair what it
color, and reconstitute it in its former softness and beauty. It will invigorate the hair, and give new life to what has become stunted. It will remove all scurf, dandruff and unpleasant influences, and prevent the hair from falling out. For sale by

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Oct. 3d, 1857.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO STATE ARE WE."

LYCEUM. At the annual meeting of the Quincy Lyceum held in the Lyceum Room on Wednesday evening of last week, the following officers were chosen for the year ensuing.

President—Henry Walker.
Vice President—Henry M. Saville.
Secretary—R. H. Fletcher.
Treasurer—Horace B. Spear.
Caretakers—Daniel K. Flint, Stephen Morse, Jr., and Edwin W. Marsh.
Tickets for the course, the same as in former years, and a notice will be given at a future time, where they can be obtained.

BANK SUSPENSIONS. The Philadelphia banks wholly or in part, have suspended specie payments. The banks at Baltimore, on the same day followed their example. The Savings Bank in the former city were besieged, but refused to pay out deposits without the two weeks' notice. In Baltimore there was no run upon these institutions. A partial or temporary suspension has also occurred at Washington.

The New York Evening Post says the general belief in our most intelligent financial circles is that these suspensions will not affect injuriously the monetary affairs in New York. The same paper expresses the opinion that there is no ground for apprehension for the banks of New England.

Rhode Island money, of all the Banks, is refused at the Suffolk bank.

RAILROAD TIME. We would call the attention of our readers to the change in the time of the leaving of trains, on the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad, which took place on Monday last. For particulars see their advertisement in our columns.

DRAMATIC. The citizens of Quincy are soon to be visited by Messrs. Hubbard & Merston's celebrated troupe, consisting of the best dramatic talent in New England. They will open their budget of comedies, at the Town Hall, on Monday evening next, and be continued, with variations, every succeeding evening during the week. The entertainments will consist in part, of some of the best dramatic pieces, interspersed with anecdotes, songs, wit, and &c. The scenery, which we are told is very rich, has received its magic influence from the brush of that celebrated artist, G. C. Fletcher. In addition to such exhibitions, which adds much to their interest. Good music will be in attendance to culminate the occasion with its harmony. Under the direction of Mr. Monroe, we are confident that entire satisfaction will be given. The Company is now at Hingham, receiving well-merited praise from crowded audiences, and the smiles of approbation which have invariably attended their visits elsewhere. A rich treat we think is in reserve for the lovers of the drama and those who would wish to beguile away a pleasant hour. On Saturday evening there will be a concert. For particulars see small bills.

JACK FRAY. This annual visitor made his first appearance for the season, on Wednesday morning last. It was evident from the cold blasts of the preceding evening that he was somewhere in the neighborhood. The crystallized vapor as it hung upon the green herbage, looked like sparkling gems in the brilliancy of a morning's sun. The old fellow thought to catch us napping. But he was mistaken. He may now make his visits as often and as long as he pleases. We are prepared to receive him.

BRITISH HUMANITY. By late accounts from India, it will be seen that this nation, so warm in her sympathies for the welfare of the Indian and colored population of this continent,—in spending her treasures upon a servile race in her possessions in the West Indies,—and supporting a priesthood at home at an expense of millions of pounds per annum, to Christianize her subjects, has committed an outrage upon a weak and inoffensive people, revolting to humanity, and unparalleled for its cruelty, in the history of the world. It appears that the Sepoys, natives of Hindostan, becoming tired of British misrule, in their attempt to throw off the oppressive yoke of their task masters, carried on a most relentless warfare. A few of the ring-leaders having been taken, the English, in order, as they say, to strike terror in their ranks, were determined to make examples of them. Accordingly, on a suitable occasion, a dozen or more, were hanged each to the mouth of a cannon, which was heavily loaded with powder, and at a signal given, where discharged, blowing the bodies of the unfortunate victims into a thousand atoms. An eye witness, who was present at one of these executions, says, the scene was awful, and the stench insufferable.

THE BANKS. The Directors of the principal banks of this State, recently held a meeting in Boston, where it was agreed to extend their issues, to the amount of several millions, to meet the pressing wants of the business community. This is but a simple act of justice. They helped them into their present difficulties, and it is but fair that they should now furnish the means to help them out.

THE BUSINESS CARD. published in our paper of last week, appears to have been favorably received by our principal traders, generally. It is hoped that the few remaining ones, will yet fall in with so wholesome and salutary a regulation.—The hour chosen, we should think late enough in our long winter evenings for any establishment to keep open; and if the rule was universally adopted, there is no doubt but the same amount of business would be accomplished, as if continued to a later hour. Recollect, gentlemen, that those in your employ, require rest and time for mental repose, to recruit their wearied energies for the labors of the coming day. "All work and no play, makes Jack a dull boy."

NEW PUBLISHING HOUSE.—French & Co., No. 75 Washington street, Boston. The Messrs. French & Co. have removed into that new and spacious building which has been in the course of erection for the past six months: a beautiful piece of architecture, attracting universal attention. It is five stories exclusive of the basement, is light, airy and pleasant, and is furnished with all the conveniences and comforts of a first-class modern structure.

Its arrangements are admirable in every particular. In the front part, immediately opposite the entrance, is a stand with shelves, on which are placed all new publications. Upon either side of the store are handsome counters. Attached to the wall are cases and shelves for stationary, books and the numberless and nameless variety of goods usually found in an establishment of this kind. The windows are so arranged as to make a handsome display of goods.

It is the intention of Messrs. F. & Co., to conduct their business with unremitting enterprise—in fact, to be surpassed by none. Their facilities are ample, to every desirable degree, and their capital all that any emergency may require. Mr. French still remains at the head of the publishing department; Mr. Wm. Hill is the financial and outside partner; and Mr. C. Libbey will attend to the literary matters. This force will be aided by experienced clerks, so that nothing will be wanting to render it all its proprietors promise, or that the public may desire.

It will be a complete and most extensive book establishment, worthy of a visit. We cordially wish the firm prosperity and long continuance.

NEW COMPOSITE STRICK. A piece of furniture indispensable in a printing office.—In the hands of the compositor, it is the receptacle which receives the type and admits of every line being adjusted in such a manner as to be readily made up into columns or pages for the press. We have been using one for the past week, upon a new principle, the invention of O. F. Groves, of Middletown, (Conn.) It is evidently an improvement; dispensing with the screw, and substituting in its place a lip or clasp. It works to admiration; any alteration in measure is easily made, without the tedious and troublesome use of the screw driver. The craft will understand us, and appreciate its merits.

FAILURES! Bank stopages!! and Marine disasters,—come upon us thick and fast.—Who will deny after this, that this has not been an eventful season, for casualties, celestial speculations, terrestrial humbugs, heavy crops, and heavier prices. There is this consolation left, however, that the explosion of these airy bubbles, cannot make one spear of grass less. They carry nothing down with them. The simple truth is, somebody has got the property of somebody else, which they cannot pay for, and which must revert again to the right owner. There is no harm done. Nothing to be alarmed about. No natural law has been violated. It is simply a reckoning day with speculators. A salutary purgation, which will restore to the trading community a healthier action.

SPIRITUALISM. We understand that Miss Ross T. Amey, of Roxbury, will address the audience at Johnson's Hall (in this town) tomorrow morning and afternoon, commencing at 10 3/4 o'clock, A. M., and at 2 1/2 o'clock, P. M.

Miss Amey, it is said, is one of the most popular and interesting Trance Speakers, engaged in the cause of Spiritualism. A collection will be taken at the close of the afternoon address to defray the expenses of the meetings.

The public are respectfully invited to attend.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES will also be held at the Stone Temple, and Town Hall, as usual.

A PROTRACTED LAW CASE. A complaint was instituted against the proprietor of the Hancock House, of this place, for a breach of the Maine Liquor Law. The case was first brought before Justice Kingsbury, of Weymouth, and then referred to the Court of Common Pleas at Dedham. It has been dragging along at a snail's pace, for ten or twelve days past, much to the annoyance and inconvenience of quite a number of our citizens, who have been summoned as witnesses. Poor fellows, they look already as if they had been through a suit in Chin-cherry. The finale, we shall probably be able to give in our next.

SINGULAR. It is stated in the New York Post that very good brandy has been made from the Chinese Sugar Cane, at a cost of about thirty cents a gallon. Alcohol can be readily made of it, for champagne and other purposes.

What about that Chowder?

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.
John E. Thayer, a leading Banker in Boston died on Tuesday morning.

Several negroes were lately put up at auction in Norfolk County, (Va.) and sold to labor for a term sufficient to liquidate their taxes. Singular to relate, four of them were purchased by a slave, who felt quite proud of the distinction and made known his determination to get the full value of his money out of them or know the reason why.

It costs the New York Central Company one million three hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year for wood. It is estimated that not less than one thousand cords are consumed daily—costing not less than four dollars per cord.

A party of twenty-five or thirty Italian organ grinders, left Philadelphia lately for Boston. They took with them a sum sufficient for each man to purchase a homestead in his native land.

The bills of the Colchester bank, Colchester, (Conn.) are now taken by the Suffolk bank, Boston.

There are at present four hundred and thirty-seven convicts in the State Prison at Charlestown, (Mass.)

To carry a Collins Steamer from New York to Liverpool requires eight hundred tons of coal.

The friends of Gov. Gardner talk of holding a grand ratification convention for Plymouth County, at Abington.

In New York the Grand Jury brought in an indictment, against Mrs. Cunningham for the bogus baby affair, and she was released on bail.

The Republicans in the Minnesota Constitutional Convention voted down the proposition for negro suffrage by a two-thirds vote.

The Boston Post puts the Randolph Bank at the top of the list in Massachusetts. The last sale of this stock was at one hundred and thirty-five dollars per share, dividend off.

A National Exhibition of imported blood and American horses will be held on the Hampden Parks, at Springfield, (Mass.) commencing on Wednesday, Sept. 30th and holding four days.

Lines on the death of Sumner Leavitt.

Mourn not—did I say, mourn not?
Oh no, I would not speak thus;
Since death has claimed a kind husband,
We know thy hopes are now crushed.

Thy afflictions on earth have been great;
But thy trials with patience are borne;
No murmurs escaped from thy lips,
Then how can I bid thee not mourn.

He was taken away from thy side
When thou needest his kind sympathy
To cheer thee through life's rugged pathway,
Since thy sight has been taken from thee

Thou wert not permitted to see Thy husband in death's cold embrace;
Nor to view that expression of happiness
Which rested upon his pale face.

His sickness was long and severe—
His sufferings we ne'er can know;
But still, his attachment to you,
Made it the more painful to go.

But we trust he is now at rest
In those blest mansions above;
Permitted perhaps to watch o'er you
And these children he so fondly loved.

And soon you will throw off the chains
Of this earth, and unite with him;
And then in presence of your loved one,
Your sight will ne'er more grow dim.

Repine not, then at your lot,
But in that dear Saviour trust—
For he doeth all things well
And his ways are right and just.

Again, then, I say to you, weep
For the Saviour, he wept for you;
Who shared alike our affliction,
And all our sufferings knew.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 29th ult., Willis H. son of Mr. Foster and Mrs. Mary Brown, aged 1 year and 6 months.
On the 30th ult., Mr. William Belcher, aged 68 years and 9 months.

THE MUSTER at Taunton, of the Third Brigade of Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, under Brigadier General Pierce, during the past week, was taken all in all, a fine affair. The weather, as we have stated before, was every thing which could be desired. The most perfect order was preserved at the encampment, as all gambling and tipping houses were promptly suppressed. The ground was visited by immense crowds of spectators, honored by a full delegation of ladies. The Light Guards with many other companies arrived at the encampment, on Tuesday evening, and went immediately into quarters. Nineteen companies were enrolled, with full ranks, presenting quite a martial appearance. The troops, it is said, exhibited much improvement over previous years, in regard to drill and discipline, and their performance was marked with a high degree of excellence.

On Friday Adjutant Gen. Stone reviewed the troops. The review was gone through with in fine style, and was the principal feature of the exercises of the day. The troop have appeared to most excellent advantage throughout the encampment, and the Brigade never occupied a better position than at present.

The Fourth Regiment which has been present under entirely new officers, made a fine appearance, and Col. Packard and his command have won golden opinions from all sorts of military people.

The Guards left the ground on Saturday morning and arrived in town about noon, hale and hearty. After firing a salute, they retired to their armory, from thence to their homes, to rest from their toils and labor.

Special Notices.

NOTICE. There will be a meeting of the Adams Literary Association in the hall over C. Gil & Co's Bookstore, on MONDAY EVENING next, Oct. 5th at 7 1/2 o'clock.

THE SECRET INFIRMITIES OF

Just Published, Gratis, the 25th Thousand.

A FEW words on the rational treatment, with-out Medicine, of Seminal torques or Local Weakness, Nutritional Emersion, Genital and Nervous Debility, Premature Decay of the System, Impotency, and Impediments to Marriage generally, by H. DE LANEY, M.D.

The important fact that the many alarming complaints, originating in the impudence and indolence of youth, may be easily removed without Medicine, is in the small, terse, clearly demonstrated, and the entirely new and highly successful treatment, as adopted by the Author, fully explained, by means of which every one is enabled to cure himself perfectly at the least possible cost, thereby avoiding all the advertised nostrums of the day.

Sent to any address, gratis and post free, in a sealed envelope, by remitting two postage stamps to Dr. DE LANEY, 17 Lispenard Street, New York Oct 3

CONGRESS BOOTS

FOR

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

BY LIZZIE R. TORREY.

O Thou Eternal Being! Power Supreme!
Unseen, and silent as the passing hour!
Yet visible in morning's golden beam,
And speaking to us by each tree and flower!
Where shall we find thy secret hiding place?
O, when and where shall see thine awful face?
Thou shedst on all thy bright and gladdening rays
And cheer'st the soul with hopes of happier days
Thou givest freely to the rich and poor,
The perfect man, also the evil doer.
O what is man? a cloud,—for less than nought,
Hidest thou not him endowed with power and thought,
And kindled in his soul that sacred fire,
Which eye, will burn, though all things else expire.

No Tears in Heaven.

I met a child, his feet were bare,
His weak frame shivered with the cold;
His youthful brow was knit with care;
His flashing eye his sorrow told.
Said I, poor boy, who weepst thou?
My parents both are dead, he said;
I have not where to lay my head;
O, I am lone and friendless now!
Not friendless, child; a friend on high
For you his precious blood has given;
Cheer up, and bid each tear be dry—
There are no tears in Heaven.

I saw a man in life's gay noon,
Stand weeping o'er his young bride's bier;
And must we part, he cried, so soon?
As down his cheek there rolled a tear.
Heart-stricken one, said I, weep not!
Weep not! in accents wild he cried,
But yesterday my loved one died,
And shall she be so soon forgot?
Forgotten? No! still let her love Sustain thy heart, with angelic riven;
Strive thou to merit thy bride above,
And dry your tears in Heaven.

I saw a gentle mother weep,
As to her throbbing heart she pressed
An infant, seemingly asleep,
On its kind mother's thrilling breast.
Fair one, said I, pray weep no more,
Sifted she, the seed of my hope
I now are called to render up—
My babe has reached death's gloomy shore.
Young mother, yield no more to grief,
Nor be by passion's tempest driven,
But find in these sweet words relief,
There are no tears in Heaven.

Poor traveller o'er life's troubled wave—
Cast down thy grief, o'erwhelmed by care—
There is an Arm above can save,
Then yield not thou to fell despair.
Look upward, where angels look above!
What though the thunder's echo loud—
The sun shines bright beyond the cloud!
Then trust thy Redeemer's love.
Where'er thy lot in life be cast,
Whether of toil or we be given—
Be firm—remember to the last,
There are no tears in Heaven.

All Well.

No seas again shall sever,
No desert intervene;
No deep and flowing river Shall roll its tide between.
No bleak cliffs upward towering Shall bound our eager sight;
No tempest darkly lowering Shall warp us in its night.
Love, and unsevered union
Of soul with those we love,
Nearness and glad communion
Shall be our joy above.
No dream of wasting sickness,
No thought of ache or pain,
No fretting hours of weakness
Shall mar our peace again.
No death our homes overshadowing
Shall e'er our harps unstring;
For all is life and singing
In presence of our King.

Anecdotes.

An admirer of dogs, having had a new litter of a fine breed, a friend wished him to set him down for a puppy! I set you down for one a great while ago, was the answer.

A Yankee boy from Maine, visiting Niagara, exclaimed, as he saw the foam at the foot of the falls, Why, pa, how much soap it must take to make so much suds.

Well, honest fellow, said a village upstart to a farmer at work in his field, 'tis your business to sow, but we reap the fruits of your labor.

'Tis very likely you may, replied the farmer, for I am sowing hemp.

Bill, I've been in real estate a little, lately. Well, John, how much have you dipped in?
Bought a lot in the cemetery, and a half acre for a residence, lot just north of it.
Just north? What in the deuce did you go so far north for? Going to live there?
Yes, Bill, I want a home beyond the grave.
Bill looks solemn, and both vanish whistling a melancholy air.

A gentleman was once making fun of a sack which a young lady wore.
You had kept quiet, was the lady's reply, or I would have given you the sack.
I should be most happy, was the gallant response, if you would give it to me as it is, with yourself inside of it.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason why Potash has been put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.
Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soaps, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the key is all prepared in five or ten minutes.
1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into 20 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for making laundry and Hotels.
Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sal Soda.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.
May 23

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked; thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first, (name and picture, twisted Lead-bread, with a glass effervescing water on the top, as you see in the bill.)
Full directions for making Bread with Sour Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry; also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Seltzer Powders, will accompany each package.

Ball's Great
SCROFULAR REMEDY.

THIS Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant and agreeable to the taste, and simple in its action, causing neither vomiting or purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease, regulates the Bowels, removes all vitiated secretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that feeling of languor which is often experienced in the Spring and Summer, and renovates and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.
In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofulous Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Tumors, Ulcers, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Inflammatory Rheumatism, Fever, Sores, White Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Bacher's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eczema or Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.
It is also an effectual cure for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Costiveness and Derangement of the Urinary Organs.
It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and other diseases peculiar to FEMALES, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, Affections of the Kidneys, Cataplasia of the Heart, Dizziness and Headache.
It can be given with perfect safety and most desirable results in all cases, to any person from infancy to old age.
Made and sold by WM. SMITH HALL, Sole Proprietor, Quincy, Mass., to whom all orders must be addressed. Sold also by Redding & Co. No. 8 State Street, Geo. C. Goodwin, No. 99 Union Street, Boston, and all Druggists and Medicine Dealers throughout the United States.

BY BIRD WILD.

A golden autumn sunset, lingered in gorgeous loneliness over one of the finest landscapes of a southern land. Leafy shrub, and flower slept in the warm voluptuous fragrance of the dreamy atmosphere; even insect life seemed for the moment lulled into delicious repose, and no hum of bird or bee broke the stillness of earth or sky, wave or forest.

On the marble terrace of a stately mansion, stood a fair lady, motionless as all around her. Her dark eyes, in which seemed to well up a fountain of rushing tears, were fixed unflinchingly on the forest, broad bay, and sweeping plain, as if the mistress of so much beauty looked within upon the wild dark waves of her own troubled soul, rather than give any heed to external objects.

At length the heavy moisture which burdened the sweeping fables, could be kept back no longer—but rolled in slow, large drops down her clear pale cheeks; and rising she paced with heavy footsteps, to and fro the terrace, wringing her hands as she did so, until the diamonds which sparkled on her fingers, cut the delicate skin by their forcible contact.

She was a woman of majestic presence, with noble, fine cut features, raven hair braided in heavy masses, and eyes in whose depths of darkness slept a soul too passionate and impulsive for happiness.

Softly as that eye could melt into love, it could flash with anger too; and seductive as was the rich lip, it could curl in withering scorn, even at those she loved the most, did they dare to cross her empress will.

Little heeded that lady in her superb beauty—in her proud, luxurious consciousness of power and position, in her dark vehement grief, little cared she of aught in life, save the bitter lesson of repentance she was now learning.

After pacing the terrace for perchance an hour, she suddenly composed her features into a rigid calmness, drew her stately figure up to its full height, and swept with a queenly step, from the piazza through a door which opened into a small library, exquisitely fitted up.

It was evident she expected to meet some one there, for her assumed calmness gave way to looks of the deepest disappointment, as she found the room vacant.

place, kill many every day. I see their canoes crossing the river early in the morning for an island opposite, where they are to be found. Next week I shall try my hand at shooting, or at least fighting, some of the "hawkers."

Wild pigeons abound here in any desired quantity. In company with a friend I went gunning them one morning this week; we got all we could carry and returned to dinner.

This is a fine country for the farmer, or any one, who is willing to put up with deprivations. But for my part, I have seen no country for a residence, I have seen no cities that will compare with Boston, nor no towns like old Quincy. And my word for it, no man who enjoys the comforts of a New England home, or the pleasure of a New England society will ever be contented in the new towns of the West, among the pigs and Dutchmen.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisements of rich and desirable dry goods, by our friends Messrs. Chandler & Co., 6 and 8 Summer street, Boston.

For the Patriot.
The Crisis.

Some of the newspapers whose interest is interwoven with the trading community, are congratulating their readers, with the assurance, that in the monetary world, the worst has been passed; that the gulf which yawned to receive them, has been bridged over, and that they are now safely on the other side. That as soon as confidence is restored business will again resume its natural course. We hardly know whether to be pleased with this piece of intelligence or not, when we recollect the part which the banks for a number of years past have played to aggravate and bring about this evil. Their credit has been at the service of the most unscrupulous speculators, and their notes freely used by them in buying up every article which enters into the domestic consumption of the people. The sugar crop for a time was entirely in their hands. Every cargo which arrived in the country, was immediately stored away and refused to be sold unless on advance of nearly an hundred per cent. was acceded to. Acres of molasses, for want of a better shelter, were exposed to the inclemency of the weather, there to waste their sweets upon the ground, because purchasers could not be found who were willing to pay double the worth of their value. In their dreams, immense fortunes were to be made. The people, honest souls, it was thought, might be relieved of a few millions more and not arouse their suspicions. The scheme no doubt would have succeeded and the most ardent wishes of the operators been fulfilled, had not the main prop been withdrawn. The banks, suspicious of trouble, refused any longer to countenance the fraud, and of course, the airy bubble at once fell to the ground. Molasses, which a few weeks ago, brought seventy-five cents, is now selling for forty; and sugar has felt in like proportion. We repeat, we do not know, but that it would be best to let the work go on—until other things receive a similar tumble down.

If the above transactions in the financial circles does not open the eyes of the people to their true interests, we do not know what will. They have the remedy in their own hands—they should apply it. Let them refuse hereafter to take the small notes of these institutions. Drive them back at once into their vaults. Incalculable benefits would result to the toiling millions by adopting such a course. It would bring the precious metals into immediate circulation; restore to property a specie value; check in a measure the mad spirit of speculation, and keep at home a large amount of gold and silver, which is now sent abroad, to purchase foreign gewgaws to pamper pride and luxury.

For the Patriot.
Mr. Banks a Workingman.

Piddlestick! Why not with the same propriety call him a playactor? He was once stage struck; and met with about the same success in that field of his early labors as he did in the workshop. He left both in disgust. We disown him. He has not one feeling in common with us; or a single Workingman's principle in his nature. A man is known by the company he keeps. Mr. Banks draws to his embrace the most inveterate opponents of the industrial classes. He is surrounded by sharpers and speculators, and is in the keeping of old Hartford Convention Federalists. The Working classes will never accept the services of a political adventurer, or one "Who follows the supple knee that thrills may follow fawning." Their standard bearer must be honest, with a spotless reputation, who will faithfully represent them. Their principles are the principles of Nature. They need no concealment, but a frank and open avowal.

Deaths.

A TEMPORARY RESPITE. The difficulty between Mr. Webb and the friends of the Maine Liquor Law, has finally been referred to the next term of the Court of Common Pleas to be held at Dedham, for arbitration. Since the disposal of the case, we have recognized in our streets quite a number of our old acquaintances, whom we had almost forgotten. They look natural, but it is evident they have seen hard service.

For the Patriot.
The Banks.

"They have stopped Specie payment," This is the language used when speaking of the affairs of these institutions. As if they ever discharged their obligations in any other currency. Their refusal to redeem their notes in specie, is simply a refusal to pay their honest debts. As direct proof of their insolvency as the individual whose note is protested at their counters.

INDIAN MEDICINE WOMAN. Mrs. Susan Glossian, the Native Indian Doctress, of the Penobscot Tribe, has pitched her wigwag near the Railroad Depot, in this town, where she most respectfully offers her services in the Original Healing Art, to the sick and afflicted in this vicinity. Her healing skill is original, having come down through many generations. The College in which she was educated is the Forest, and her diploma is the experience of her Ancestors from time immemorial and thirty years her own. She has certificates of cures in her possession, and can get many recommendations from those she has cured. Mrs. Glossian is a sister to Dr. Joseph Newell, Native Indian Physician. She uses no remedies but roots, herbs, barks, &c., which the Great Spirit has caused to grow for medicine for his children.

Housekeepers may not be aware that it is unsafe to use three-fourths of the Salutaris now sold as the pure article. There is no danger in using B. T. Babbett's as he manufactures all his Salutaris from common salt, on a new medicinal process. It is also important that all interested should know, that B. T. Babbett's adulterated Potash is the best article of the kind manufactured. No housekeeper should be without it, as it is almost an indispensable article for domestic purposes. The high character Mr. B. T. Potash has attained, and the neat manner in which it is put up in "The Cass," makes it preferable to any other kind in use. Manufactured and sold at 68 & 70 Washington street, New York, and 38 India street, Boston. For particulars see advertisements in another column.

Poetry.

The Shoemaker.

An honest cobbler once I knew,
His name was Joel Patch;
His shop was small, and had a door
That opened with a latch.

They called this man a whole-soled chap;
He worked from morn till night;
And though his boots were apt to be,
Yet he was never tight.

In early life this cobbler was
Of parents both bereft;
And though he never learned to dance,
Yet he could right and left.

The smallest job he ne'er refused,
But did it with a will;
And after he had boots did foot,
You'd have to foot his bill.

For politics he had no taste—
They made him sick at heart;
And though no doctor, yet he knew Full well the healing art.

He had a tender loving wife—
They used to call her Peg;
The reason why they called her so,
She had a wooden leg.

Although her understanding was
To some extent impaired,
She took delight in pleasing him,
And in his labors shared.

He also tried to please his peg;
The mark he liked to see;
His work was excellently done,
His wife was dune—saw, sew.

He never quarreled with his wife,
Nor had the slightest brawl;
But ever looked upon her as Upon his soul in ail.

One day he was with illness seized,
And waxing near his end—
At least his wife so thought, and she Did for the doctor send.

'Tis hard to fathom his disease;
But yet 'twas very plain
That all throughout his body ran
An awful shoe-tie pain.

His wife tried hard to get him well,
And by his side would stand;
And seemed resolved to place him soon
Upon the mending hand.

The doctor called—"twas all in vain;
Said he, his failing fast;
And in about an hour or so
The cobbler breathed his last.

Nobody's Song.

I'm thinking just now of Nobody;
And all that Nobody's done,
For I've a passion for Nobody,
That Nobody else would own;

I hear the name of Nobody,
For from Nobody I spring;
And I sing the praise of Nobody,
As Nobody, mine has sung.

In life's young morning Nobody
To me was tender and dear;
And my cradle was rocked by Nobody,
And Nobody was ever near;

I was petted and spoiled by Nobody,
And Nobody brought me up;
And when I was hungry, Nobody Gave me a dime to sup.

I went to school to Nobody,
And Nobody taught me to read;
I played in the street with Nobody,
And to Nobody ever gave heed;

I recounted my tale to Nobody,
For Nobody was willing to hear;
And my heart I clung to Nobody,
And Nobody shed a tear.

And when I grew older, Nobody Gave me a helping turn;
And by the good aid of Nobody
I began my living to earn;

And hence I counted Nobody,
And said Nobody's I'd be,
And asked to marry Nobody,
And Nobody married me.

Thus I trudged along with Nobody,
And Nobody cheered my life,
And I have a love for Nobody,
Which Nobody has for his wife.

So here's a health to Nobody,
For "Nobody's now in town,"
And I've a passion for Nobody,
That Nobody else would own.

Anecdotes.

In Memphis, Tenn., a countryman stood gazing at Mansfield's window, where two skeletons hung suspended—one being that of a man, the other a boy. A stranger coming up the following conversation took place.

Whose skeleton is that? asked the countryman, pointing to the large one.

That is Shakespeare's.

And whose is that? continued the countryman, pointing to the smaller.

That is Shakespeare's too, answered the wag.

How can that be?

Why, that's him when he was a boy! was the reply.

O, I never thought of that!

My lars, said Mrs. Fozzie to her husband, oblige me with a five pound note to-day to purchase a new dress.

Shan't do any such thing, Agnes—you called me a bear yesterday.

Lor, lor, that was nothing—I meant by it that you were fond of hugging.

You little —. I have no five, but here's a ten.

Joe, what makes your nose so red?

Friendship!

How do you make that out?

I've got a friend who is very fond of brandy, and as he is too weak to take it strong, he constituted myself his taster.

I meant to have told you of that hole, said a fisherman to his friend who was walking in his garden, and tumbled into a well of water.

No matter, says Pat, blowing the mud and silt out of his mouth, I've found it.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of substituting his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with out directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into 12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sal Soda.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.

Hall's Great SCROFULAR REMEDY.
THIS Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant and agreeable to the taste, and cures all skin action, causing neither vomiting nor purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease, regulates the Bowels, removes all vitiated secretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that feeling of Languor which is often experienced in the Spring and Summer, and renovates and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.
In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofulous Humors, such as Sulf. Rheuma, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Tumors, Ulcers, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Inflammatory Rheumatism, Fever, Sores, White Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Barber's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eczema or Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.
It is also an effectual cure for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Costiveness and Derangement of the Urinary Organs.
It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and other diseases peculiar to FEMALES, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart, Dizziness and Headache.
It can be given with perfect safety and most desirable results in all cases, to any person from infancy to old age.
Made and sold by WM. SMITH HALL, Sole Proprietor, Quincy, Mass., to whom all orders must be addressed. Sold also by Redding & Co. No. 8 State street; Geo. C. Goodwin, No. 99 Union street, Boston, and all Druggists and Medicine Dealers throughout the United States.

Miscellaneous.

For the Patriot.

Result of an Ecclesiastical Council.

Pursuant to letters missive from the Evangelical Congregational Church in Quincy, an Ecclesiastical Council convened in the Town Hall, in Quincy, Sept. 24th, and at the adjourned session at the Congregational Library Building, in Boston, Oct. 5th 1857.

The following churches were represented—

The first

Poetry.

Autumn.

The Autumn light is sleeping
Upon the yellow plain;
The harvest men are reaping
The swarms of golden grain;
The merry maids the fawns throng,
And hand the sleeves with cheerful song,
While children stand the ears to glean
That fall the maidens' hands between.

At length with day's declining,
The western sun sinks bright;
The harvest moon, now shining,
Floods heaven with mellow light;
Upon the green sward merrily,
To notes of rustic minstrelsy,
Young men and maidens, free from care,
Dance in the evening autumn air.

Now zero the leaves are growing
With many a russet streak,
Just like the death-bloom growing
On a dying maiden's cheek.
Now bleakly blows the autumn breeze,
And sweeps the leaves from moaning trees,
And rain by day and frost by night
O'erspread the flowers and fields with blight.

But though the leaves are dying,
And flowers have lost their bloom—
Though blight on earth is lying,
And heaven is filled with gloom,
O trustful heart, be of good cheer,
For time brings round the rolling year;
When Winter and Spring and Summer are o'er
The golden Autumn will come once more.

Indian Corn.

The West can boast of glorious streams,
And prairie's grandest lawn—
Of lake and forest old and green,
But most of Indian corn.

'Tis sweet when Summer sun goes down,
When winds have ceased to blow,
To list its rustling, exulting sound,
And think we hear it grow.

I love to pull it from the stalk
When it is in the mill,
And husk it out its sheath, and talk
Of its soft shining silk—
Its glossy floss, its silk.

And when at noon its dewy dash
Our work for bell or horn,
Give me a dish of succotash,
Or ears of Indian corn.

Fill take it with a true delight,
And costlier dishes scorn,
For nothing tempers the appetite
Like ears of roasted corn.

Sweet ears of Indian corn,
Then when its sheaves stand thick about,
And fruits the fields adorn,
How gushes out the merry shout
From huskers of the corn—
The yellow, golden corn.

Where freedom floats on every breeze,
And fields of Indian corn
Are spread out on the land like seas,
I joy that I was born—
Blessed land of Indian corn.

Contentment.

Think't thou the steed that restless roves
O'er rocks and mountains, fields and groves,
With wild, unbridled bound,
Finds fresher pasture than the bee,
Or thy milk or vernal tree,
Intend to store her industry
Within her wakened round?

Think't thou the fountain forced to turn Through marble vase or sculptured urn,
Affords a sweeter draught
Than that which, in its native sphere,
Perennial, undisturbed and clear,
Flows, the lone traveler's thirst to cheer,
And wake his grateful thought?

Think't thou the man whose mansions hold
The worldling's pomp and miser's gold, Obtains a richer prize
Than he who, in his cot at rest,
Finds heavenly peace a willing guest,
And bears the praise in his breast
Of treasure in the skies?

Anecdotes.

A certain old lady, who had been famed
For her looks, and not very sweet words, touching the accidents of life, was observed to have become very amiable.

What a happy change has come over you, said a neighbor.

Why, said the transformed, to tell you the truth I have been all my life striving for a contented mind, and have finally concluded to sit down contented without it.

Said a woman to an old maid, who reproached her for her choice of a husband—
"To be sure, he is not so good a husband, as he should be; but he's a powerful sight better than none."

A gentleman who had been married for several years to a woman not notoriously loving, one morning said to a friend—
"My wife came near calling me honey, yesterday."

Did she indeed; how near?

Why, she screamed after me as I left the garden gate, as follows—
"Shut the gate, Old Deswain!"

Two persons contending very sharply on matters regarding a late election, got to rather high words, when one of them said,
"You never catch a lie coming out of my mouth."

You may well say that, for they fly out so fast that nobody can catch 'em! replied the other.

Sally, what time do your folks dine?
As soon as you go away; that's mistakes.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POT-ASH. The adulteration has become so general, that it is impossible to select the valuable properties, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap;
it makes the lather suds, and the strength is lost.
One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing
the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce good
the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for the best of Soap, Hard or Soft.
It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
Is prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in this manner as to produce Bread, Butter, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first. Cakes and puddings, twisted Loaves, and with a glass of sparkling water on the top, as you see in the bill.)

Full directions for making Bread with Salt
Milk and Cream, and all kinds of Pastry,
also for making Soda Water; also, directions for

Ball's Great
SCROFULAR REMEDY.

THIS Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant to the taste, and simple in its action, causing neither vomiting or purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease—regulating the Bowels, removing all vitiated secretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver, and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that feeling of languor which is often experienced in the Spring and Summer, and renovates and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.

In thousands of cases of Scrofula, or Scrophulous Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Tumors, Ulcers, Bronchitis, Asthma, Gout, Inflammation, Rheumatism, Fever, Sore Throat, White Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Barber's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eczema or Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.

It is also an effectual cure for Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Costiveness and Derangement of the Urinary Organs.

It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and other diseases peculiar to FEMALES, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart,
Dizziness and Headache.

It can be given with perfect safety and most desirable results in all cases, to any person infected by its use.

Made and sold by WM. SMITH HALL, Sole
Proprietor, Quincy, Mass., to whom all orders
must be addressed. Sold also by Redding & Co.,
No. 8 State Street; Geo. C. Goodwin, No. 99
Union Street, Boston, and all Druggists and Medicine Dealers throughout the United States.

PICKARD'S
Great Regenerator and Reproductor
OF THE HUMAN HAIR.

THIS is no humbug, but, if used according to the directions, will reproduce hair on Bald Heads. It will never fail to restore the hair when falling off, let the cause be what it may. It will, in all cases, turn gray hair to its original color, and reinvigorate it in its former health, lustre, softness and beauty. It will invigorize the roots of the Hair, and give new life to Hair that has become stunted. It will remove all scales, dandruff and unpleasant itching, scalds, eruptions and all kinds of trouble from the scalp. For dressing the Hair it has no equal.

In short, it is a perfect Hair Invigorator and Tonic. It has never failed to effect a cure. It is an entirely different preparation from any yet offered to the public. For sale by

A DEMOCRAT.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Oct. 17th, 1857.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO STEADY WE."

DEFERRED. The comments of "Franklin," on the Report of the second Ex parte Council will be inserted next week.

THE SURPRISE PARTY which waited on the Rev. Nelson Clark, and received the hospitalities of that gentleman, on Tuesday evening last, must have been highly gratifying to his feelings under present circumstances.

The attendance was large, beyond that of any former occasion, and the substantial proofs so freely bestowed, of their kind regard for his temporal welfare, gave evidence of the ardor and sincerity taken in his interest by his numerous friends.

CHINESE SUGAR CAKE. We have received through the politeness of Mr. Edward Brackett of this place, a sample of syrup manufactured by him from this cane. In richness and flavor it will compare favorably with the best imported article. The process of manufacturing, he represents as very simple. The cane is gathered in a green state, when full of sap—run through a common rolling machine; the juice thus crushed out is then placed over a slow fire for seven or eight hours—removing in the mean time, all impurities as they rise to the surface—when it will be reduced to a consistency resembling common molasses—Eleven quarts of sap yielding a pint and a half of syrup. There is no question but what sugar and molasses may both be successfully made from this cane; but it will require further experiments to determine whether it can be profitably cultivated in this climate.

NEW SINGING SCHOOL. Mr. Wentworth, so favorably known to the music world, intends, as it will be seen by his advertisement, of opening a new school, for the instruction of music. Mr. W. stands high in his profession. As a teacher he has no rival. An opportunity here offers to those wishing to acquire a knowledge of the elementary principles of that science, and of cultivating a faculty in harmony with our nature which should be improved. We bespeak for Mr. Wentworth a successful career.

NEW APOTHECARY AND DRUG STORE. The store formerly occupied by Mr. Goodnow, but more recently by Dr. J. Martin, as a Botanic Dispensary, has undergone a metamorphosis, or change, under the direction of the present proprietor, C. C. Johnson, which for neatness and a delicacy of taste, is seldom equalled in similar establishments. Appearances have a powerful effect upon the mind; even medicines, we are inclined to believe, have a more potent influence, when administered by a skilful hand or in harmony with the feelings of the patient. Mr. Johnson has a large stock of medicines; ample, we should think, to meet all the complaints human nature is heir to, or which was ever dreamt of in the philosophy of either ancient or modern pharmacy. His medicines have been compounded under his own immediate direction, and, as he assures us, from the best of materials. His varied stock embraces all kinds used in modern practice—Allopathic, Homoeopathic or Botanic. We wish him every success in his new enterprise, compatible with the interests and health of our citizens. An advertisement may be found in another column.

GRANITE SALOON. Although banks may fail and paper credit sink to rise no more—still Nature, ever bountiful! ever indulgent! will amply provide for her numerous children out of the abundance of her resources. Thus soliloquized the proprietor of the Granite Saloon, as the briny shell fish was drawn from its muddy bed, to form a savory dish that would tempt the appetite of the most fastidious epicure. Strange, said he, that men will run after shadows; stake their fortunes in paper bubbles, when the substance is spread out before them. My banks never fail. Those who make deposits in them, will always have their orders duly honored. No empty vault here. Always sufficient to meet all obligations. Discount days, on Saturdays, from 12 M. to 10 P. M.

JEWELRY. The ladies and gentlemen of this town and vicinity, we think, will be pleased to learn that our young and esteemed friend, Mr. Benjamin F. Meservy, has arrived and re-opened a shop in this place. Mr. M. intends keeping a larger assortment of Jewels than has ever been offered to the inhabitants of Quincy, and we think from the large number of patrons he received during his short stay with us on his former visit, that he will not want for customers. For particulars see his advertisement in to-day's paper.

HANCOCK LIGHT GUARDS. This fine Military Company of this town, have postponed their Fall Parade, owing to the crisis in the financial circles, and the suspension of specie payments in all the banks in this State, except the Ocean's banks, (which are under the careful and trustworthy management of that noble and successful personage, Mr. Clark,) who allowed their "specie" to be "drawn out" at all times, by both rich and poor, if they only have strong back(ers).

But the Guards not feeling willing to lose all the enjoyment usually derived from their Parade have concluded to "turn out" on Saturday afternoon next, under their noble Commander, Capt. T. H. Newcomb, on a street drill, accompanied by the Weymouth Brass Band. They will undoubtedly visit the epicurean's friend at his humble abode, and there help themselves to as much of his "specie" as will satisfy their "long pockets," to their hearts' content, as Mr. Clark has informed all who has visited him, that he is "running over," and wishes for more room.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION. The Norfolk County Teachers' Association will be held at the Town Hall in this town, on Thursday and Friday October 29th and 30th. Some able lecturers are to address the meeting, and an unusually interesting time is anticipated.

The School Committee, Teachers, and all who are interested in the cause of Education are cordially invited to attend. Ladies will be hospitably received.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES. Rev. Mr. Pitrat will preach in the Universalist Church to-morrow morning, at the usual service hour, 10-12 o'clock. He will also lecture in the same place to-morrow evening, upon the religious state of affairs in France, at the present time.

Mr. Pitrat, who is a Frenchman and has been until recently a Roman Catholic Priest, has lately returned from a visit to his native country, and will, we presume, give a very able and instructive lecture. Ladies and gentlemen are respectfully invited to attend.

RESIGNED. In consequence of continued ill health, Gen Benjamin King of Abington, has resigned the Presidency of the Union Bank of Weymouth and Braintree, and has been succeeded by Minot Tirrell, Esq., of Weymouth.

LECTURER. We learn that Dr. Wm. M. Cornell, of Boston has prepared a lecture for Lyceums and Literary Associations, upon each of the following subjects, viz:—Reciprocal influence of Mind and Body, with Imaginary Hallucinations; "Health of the Students and Sedentary;" History of Josephine, Empress of France.

Each of these is an important and interesting subject.

DRY GOODS. Our patrons will find on reading Geo. W. Warren, Barry & Co.'s advertisement, in to-day's paper, that they have a most extensive assortment of Dry Goods which they are determined to dispose of, even if they are obliged to sell at a third less than cost. Their Nos. are 191 Washington, and 55 and 57 Hawley streets, Boston, and we would invite our friends on visiting the city to give them a call.

AN ALARM OF FIRE. On Thursday last, between the hours of nine and ten, in the forenoon, the roof of the building, occupied by Mr. Brown, our former School teacher, on Cottage Avenue, was discovered to be on fire—it is supposed to have caught by a spark from Col. Packard's Ink manufactory, as the wind was blowing fresh from that quarter at the time. But little damage was done.

A CARD. A happy surprise overtaken the Pastor of the Evangelical Congregational Church in Quincy, on the evening of the 20th inst. The presence surrounded with social enjoyment among aged, middle-aged, youth and children. Banks discomfited freely. Finances improved. Many hearts beat happily with social cheer, and generous Christian sympathy. For which many thanks to the friends, and many praises to God, that a still happier meeting may be ours above, unmarred by separation.

NELSON CLARK.

NOTICE. In accordance with the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Council convened in this place, on the 20th ult., I would renew the proposition which I made to the Society over two months ago for the adjustment of our difficulties—which was as follows:

I am ready to refer all our matters in controversy, both legal and ecclesiastical, to referees properly chosen, including the suit now pending in the Supreme Court.

Quincy, Oct. 24th, 1857.

NELSON CLARK.

NOTICE. The Ladies' Fragment Society, connected with the first Congregational Church in this town, will hold their annual meeting at the house of their President, on WEDNESDAY, Oct. 28th, at two o'clock, P. M., when it is particularly requested, that all members will be present with their subscriptions and fines.

New subscribers are earnestly solicited, either as Honorary Members by paying one dollar a year; or by paying 25 cents a year, and 6 1/4 for each absence from their regular meetings.

This Society has been in existence for five years, during which time it has been constantly active.

In the course of the last year it was enabled to assist 20 families, and to distribute 151 garments, thereby relieving much suffering among the destitute. It therefore appeals with the greater confidence to those cheerfully disposed, for further aid and co-operation in either of the modes pointed out which they may be inclined to prefer.

Per order of the President.

Housekeepers may not be aware that it is unsafe to use three-fourths of the Salubritas now sold as the pure article. There is no danger in using B. T. Babbett's as he manufactures all his Salubritas from common salt, on a new medicinal principle. It is also so improved that it is safe for the most delicate.

That B. T. Babbett's unadulterated Potash is the best article of the kind manufactured.

No housekeeper should be without it, as it is almost an indispensable article for domestic purposes. The high character Mr. B. T. Potash has attained, and the neat manner in which it is put up in Tin Cans, makes it preferable to any other kind in use.

Manufactured and sold at 68 & 70 Washington street, New York, and 38 India street, Boston. For particulars see advertisements in another column.

MEDICINES!

C. C. JOHNSON,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Quincy and vicinity, that he has opened

A NEW DRUG STORE,

IN

GOODNOW'S BUILDING,

(Formerly occupied by Dr. J. Martin,) where he will be happy to wait upon all who may favor him with their patronage, day or night.

His Stock and his Prices are entirely new, and his Medicines have been selected with great care, and are warranted pure and genuine.

Mr. J. J. Powdered Articles are all fresh, as are his Herbs, and his Tinctures and Syrups have all been manufactured since his arrival here, and can be depended upon by physicians and others, as being of the proper strength and purity.

His Stock of Chemicals is large, and comprises all the varieties usually found in a well conducted Apothecary Store. Of Patent Medicines, his Stock is large and varied, and will be enlarged from time to time, as new articles appear.

Of Perfumery, Fancy Articles, Cigars, &c., a large variety of which he can sell as cheap as a GENUINE article can be purchased elsewhere.

With his large assortment of Drugs and Chemicals, Mr. Johnson is prepared to compound

Physicians' Prescriptions,

as well and accurately as they can be prepared in any city in the United States.

He has secured the services of Mr. G. W. Gookin, formerly with Mr. Spalding, Tremont street, Boston, who will act in the absence of Mr. Johnson from the Store with equal accuracy and correctness.

Mr. J. trusts by a strict attention to business, to merit a share of public patronage.

THE CHEAPEST STORE IN BOSTON!

THE undersigned, having purchased their Goods since the reduction in the Tariff, and mostly for Cash, are enabled to offer them at lower prices than at any other store in this city. And another circumstance which permits us to do this, that our RENT is not more than a quarter as much as that of any Carpet

Store on Washington Street—showing that

WE CAN SELL AT MUCH LESS PRICES!—

Please compare Washington Street prices with ours; and they can be relied upon, as once we have been off that street for the past

fixed the leading features of civilization at the time, so to speak, by its own physical properties and uses, has reflected the manners, customs and habits of the people then living. Following the idea of the poets, we call this the Iron Age; for if any period deserved such a name, it is that portion of time we call "to-day." Iron is our strength and stay; without it, the onward march of civilization must stop, and the word "Progress" be cancelled from our language. By a providential arrangement Iron is universal in its occurrences in nature, and by human ingenuity and talent it is universal in its application. Let us look, first, at its universal occurrence, and think how vast must be the quantity in the world. It is found in all the rocks that form the crust of our globe, in greater or less quantities, as may be seen from the prevalence of red and reddish brown in their colors; in all animals, for it is iron that colors the blood; in all fishes, for it exists in the waters of the sea. Go where you will, and turn in any direction you may, iron meets you at every step. There is, however, another consideration, and that is, that we seldom find it in a metallic state, but usually combined with some other element, and this is providential also, for it stands as a kind of mighty tempter, persuading and urging man to exercise his talents and to exert his genius, so that dirty looking lump of red earth, called iron ore may, by the working of man's talents, ingenuity and genius, become the steel pen with which we write; and we say with truth that no one substance on the face of the earth has done so much in the development of man's latent powers, in rendering our lives comfortable and luxurious, and in advancing harmonious feelings, and free intercourse among the nations of the world as iron.

Let us now turn to the universality of its application. We cannot turn our eyes or thoughts in any direction without finding some purpose or use or ornament to which this metal has been successfully applied, and its peculiar characteristics render it peculiarly adapted to fill the wants of man. It is easily melted, so that we can run it into moulds of whatever device or pattern we wish; and when it is cold it is so strong and firm that it seems to be a work of Nature, rather than one of art. It is easily welded, and by this process can be readily joined in any part that is fractured, or it can be bent while hot into any curve or shape. It is tough, and will resist the strongest crushing strain; is not easily acted upon by the atmosphere; so it is just suited for the position we have given it in the nineteenth century, in which amongst our necessities and luxuries, our real and imaginary wants, it holds the place of the King of Metals.—Scientific American

POST OFFICE.

A VOICE FROM THE FAR WEST. We were highly gratified in receiving a visit from our townsman, Mr. Underwood of Chicago, on Thursday last. He looked remarkably well, a sure indication that his new home agrees with him. He represented things as very flourishing in that thriving city of the West. No bank suspensions can check its enterprise. If the representative cannot be had—the real wealth, he says, was never known to be in greater abundance. The stores in that place, he remarked, were filled to overflowing with grain—which will be unable to reach a market until next spring. Wheat was selling when he left, for sixty cents a bushel, and flour, for four dollars and fifty cents a barrel. Winter had made its appearance in some parts. On his journey down, the mountains in the western part of New York, he observed were capped with snow.

OLD COLONY AND FALL RIVER RAILROAD. The fall arrangement for the running of trains on this road went into operation on Monday last, as will be seen by the advertisement. A week's notice in advance of such alteration would better accommodate the travelling public.

For the Patriot.
To the Democracy.

Fellow Democrats, arouse! and prepare for the great battle, on Tuesday next. Never was there a time since the organization of the State Government, when your services were so much required as at the present to set the Old Ship of State right, for the past three or four years you have had no voice in the Legislative enactments, therefore the unenviable and degraded position she now holds is not chargeable to you, but has been brought about by filling the State House with inexperienced and reckless Legislators who cared nothing for the honor of the State or the prosperity of the community; they were all absorbed in their own aggrandizement. For an example, let us look at the last session of our State Assembly; over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars was squandered upon questions that had no reference whatever to the welfare of the people. Among these was the attempt to appropriate one hundred thousand dollars to assist a lawless band in a sister Territory to hold out against the laws of the country. Then again we see the strenuous efforts of these legislators to plunder a few hundred thousand more from the public crib for the Hoosier Tunnel, (this everlasting bore) which amount Mr. Banks has so faithfully agreed shall be forthcoming; if he is chosen to override the already depressed laboring community, by taking their hard earnings from the public treasury, where it has been received by the collection of this year's heavy and excessive taxation, and placed in the hands of a few railroad speculators. Another item of some importance is the Hospital at Northampton—an Institution that was never required. It stands, partially completed, a monument of legislative folly, after having expended about two hundred thousand dollars and as much more will be needed before it is ready for use—even in the face of all this extravagance they had the boldness to increase the already expanded bank capital to a great amount, which has had a tendency to bring about the present deplorable business crisis.

It may be well here to give a few items of the increase of the State expenses as taken from the State Auditors Account, viz:

The State tax as assessed in each year:

1854, $300,000.00; 1855, $449,886.50; 1856, $589,982.00; 1857, $889,973.00. The last making an increase of $300,000.00 in a single year.

And Quincy has to pay her share of this enormous tax, thirty-three hundred sixty-six dollars.

Fellow citizens and Democrats, are you willing and ready to place these lords of mis-rule in office again? I think not. I have a better opinion of the good sense of the people than to suppose that after all it is recklessness they will be so blinded to their own interest as to reinstate such parties to power again.

Democrats we have every thing to encourage us. The valiant South and the giant West, have come forth manfully and endorsed the present commendable and conservative administration of James Buchanan. Old Pennsylvania has fairly out done herself; here the direct issue was between Black Republicanism and the Democracy; as the renegade Wilnot (a Bank's specimen of the same sort, challenged Judge Packer, the Democratic candidate to stump the State with him, which he respectfully declined. But Wilnoture of success, unfurled the black banner and upon its azure folds had inscribed the alleged outrageous wrongs of "Bleeding Kansas" and "Dred Scott," and commenced his tour through the State. And what was the verdict of the people? Why, the Democracy in spite of all this much vaunted blood and thunder, have chosen Judge Packer by forty thousand majority.

Fellow Democrats, see that every voter's name is on the voting list, and have every man at the polls early, there to cast their votes for Beach, Retrenchment and Reform.

SINGING SCHOOL. The singing school under the direction of Mr. Wentworth, which meets at the Lyceum Room, we are happy to learn was opened on Friday evening last, under very flattering circumstances; over thirty scholars being present. His next lesson will be on Thursday evening next, at 7 1/2 o'clock, when the first rudiments in music will be introduced. As there is evidently quite an interest taken in the subject, we have no doubt that on this occasion a much larger number will be in attendance, to avail themselves of the opportunity of acquiring a knowledge of this beautiful science.

DENTISTRY. It always affords us pleasure to recognize and acknowledge the merit of true workmen or artists in any branch of useful business. Drs. Cummings & Flagg, Tremont street, Boston, are dentists who study and exercise their profession in such a spirit. We can conceive of nothing more complete, in respect to structure, form, finish and adaptation, than the artificial teeth they set, or the considerate and gentlemanly attention with they operate in their general practice. Their advertisement in another column, is worthy of special notice.

For the Patriot.
The Three Candidates.

First, we have Mr. Banks, who is supported by his friends, on the ground, that he is the embodiment of the principles of the Republican party. A very shrewd politician, with strong prejudices against the South on account of the manner in which they see fit to conduct their domestic affairs; who has pledged himself if elected, not to let the opportunity slide, but to take the matter immediately in hand and rectify the evil; and if fortune favors him and the treasury is not empty—to bore his way through the Hoosian mountain, as an outlet to his overflowing sympathies for that unfortunate people, and to open a more direct communication with the border ruffians of the West. Then, there is Mr. Gardner, a very conservative gentleman, who hates foreigners as he does all kinds of strong drinks. Who takes a just pride in his native State, and would feel constrained if re-elected, to ostracize them, or send them to school until they have learnt better manners, and have been cured of the foolish habit of running after the dirty Democracy. Next comes Mr. Beach, a strait out and out Democrat, of the Jeffersonian school. With pleasing manners, and a character for consistency, above reproach. His principles are said to be national. Thinks an Irish gentleman, in the political scale, is entitled to the same rights as his native born brother. That the American mantle is broad enough to cover us all. And is determined if successful in reaching that point of honor, to husband his sympathies for the poor and needy at home, rather than send them abroad where they are not needed. In accordance with his other views, he will require his salary to be paid in gold and silver as he eschews all kinds of paper money.

Auctioneer. J. H. BAXTER takes this method to inform his friends and the public, that he has been re-appointed Auctioneer and will sell at the sale of Real Estate or Personal Property at any time.

He trusts by his past experience in the business, he will be able to give entire satisfaction to all who may employ him.

He may be found at his residence on Washington Street, Quincy, Oct. 31

Caution. WHEREAS my wife, Mary A., has left my bed and board, without just provocation, I forbid all persons trusting or harboring her on my account, as I shall pay no debt of her contracting after this date.

Ladies particularly invited to attend. GEORGE SAVIL, Secretary of the Ironsides Club. Quincy, Oct. 24

Housekeepers may not be aware that it is unsafe to use three-fourths of the Saleratus now sold as the pure article. There is no danger in using B. T. Babbett's as he manufactures all his Saleratus from common salt, on a new medicinal principle. It is also important that all interested should know, that B. T. Babbett's unadulterated Potash is the best article of the kind manufactured. No housekeeper should be without it, as it is almost an indispensable article for domestic purposes. The high character Mr. B.'s Potash has attained, and the neat manner in which it is put up in Tin Cans, makes it preferable to any other kind in use. Manufactured and sold at 68 1/2 Washington street, New York, and 38 India street, Boston. For particulars see advertisements in another column. Quincy Oct. 10

IS YOUR BLOOD PURE. We have used Dr. Barron's Humor and Strengthening Syrup for a weak stomach and find it the best medicine we have ever used for that complaint. It is sold by J. C. Johnson & Co. Quincy, Oct. 10

GRANITE SALOON. At the usual hour, this day, the Saloon will be open for the reception of visitors. And on Tuesday next, Election day, the doors will be thrown wide open. A sumptuous Clam Chowder will be in readiness to meet the wants of the wasted energies of the patriotic voters, after the toils and struggles of the day; a sure balm for wounded honor and disappointed hopes. The victor and the vanquished are alike welcome.

SCHOOL TEACHER'S CONVENTION. A Convention of the School Teachers of Norfolk County was held at the Town Hall. It commenced on Thursday morning last, and closed last evening. It was pretty generally attended, and the ceremonies are said to have been more than usually interesting.

For Sale or to Let. THE Property of the late Daniel French, situated on the corner of Hancock and Temple streets.

COMPLETE Dental Establishment. DRS. CUMMINGS & FLAGG. SURGEON DENTISTS.

25 Tremont Street, (up stairs.) Boston.

DRS. C. & F., having had extensive experience in every branch of practical and scientific Dentistry, and being conversant with the best known methods and latest improvements in the profession, feel qualified to perform all operations in a manner highly satisfactory to patients, and reflecting credit upon themselves.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH. By the improved process of Atmospheric Pressure, teeth, from one to an entire set, are inserted firmly and beautifully, without the use of springs or clasps. Many beautiful specimens of Plate work, on gold, silver and platinum, are on exhibition at our Rooms, which, for taste, style and durability, we believe cannot be surpassed.

EXTRACTING TEETH. In this important and difficult branch of the profession, great care is taken to render the operation the least painful. By the application of a benumbing agent to the gum, the operation is performed with comparative little pain. This new process of extracting teeth has been in use for two years, and we feel confident in recommending it to our patrons and the public, as lessening in a great measure the dread which has heretofore existed, of dental operations. In some cases it entirely removes pain, while, in almost all instances, it does much to contribute to the comfort of patients. The application of ether, which is entirely painless, is administered to those who desire it.

FILLING TEETH. This is the most difficult operation the dental practitioner is ever called upon to perform. It often times involves the skill of operators who have been in practice many years. It is also, when well performed, the most certain and only remedy that can be applied for the cure of decayed teeth. But, to be effective, it must be executed in the most thorough and perfect manner. The preservation of a tooth, when well filled, and with suitable material, if it be afterwards kept constantly clean, may be regarded as certain. At any rate, it will never again be attacked in the same place by decay.

By the use of the new preparation of Crystal Gold, teeth are not only arrested from decay and partially saved, but verily restored to the form, comfort and utility of the original structure. By a wonderful property of gold, the metal, in its crystalline or precipitated state, by peculiar manipulation, passes from a pulpy, reluctant to a cohesive and solid mass, the same as com.

By virtue of this remarkable property, it is made to fill the cavity of a tooth, and even to restore its shape, as substantially as if it were cast.

The proprietors of this complete dental establishment will always be pleased to give their advice on the care and preservation of the teeth of children and adults, and the result of their long experience in cases requiring the opinion of practical scientific dentists. Boston, Oct. 31

Public Auction. WILL be sold, on the premises, at Public Auction on FRIDAY, the 13th day of November next, at 5 o'clock P. M., a parcel of land, with the building standing thereon, situated in that part of Quincy, called the West District, bounded and described as follows, to-wit:

Northerly on West street, Easterly on land of Benj. Cole, Southerly on land formerly of Eliza T. Crane, and Westerly on land formerly of Eliza T. Crane.

The said premises being the same that were conveyed by the Assignee of the insolvent estate of Harman, to John C. Underwood, the present owner thereof.

The said premises are to be sold in default of payment of the monthly sales, interest and fines on two mortgages made by said John C. Underwood to the Quincy Loan Fund Association.

JOSEPH T. FRENCH, Aucr. Quincy, Oct. 17

Mortgagee's Sale. WILL be sold at Public Auction, on WEDNESDAY, the 18th day of November next, at three o'clock in the afternoon, on the premises, a parcel of Land with a Dwelling House thereon, situated in Quincy, containing about 14 square rods, more or less, bounded easterly on Granite street, southerly and westerly on land of Lewis Bass, and northerly on a Private Way, being the same premises conveyed in a mortgage by George H. Locke to Charles B. Mitchell, by deed bearing date June 30th, 1856, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 248, Fol. 119.

Said Premises will be sold by virtue of a provision contained in said deed and for a breach of the condition of the same.

Witness my hand and seal of office, this 17th day of October, 1857, at Quincy, in the County of Norfolk.

Miscellaneous.

A Wedding at Nutmegville.

I had got a good deal fatigued with the season's business, and one evening while I was stretching my limbs on the sofa, my wife says to me:

Mr. Lovell, why don't you take a short turn up at Nutmegville and recruit yourself a little?

Happiest of thoughts, I replied. Well, I'll pack up the trunk to-night and be off tomorrow morning by the first train.

Well, no, husband, I can't go myself, for I'm—

And then followed a dozen reasons, and at last she came to the conclusion that she could not accompany me.

The fact is, the present season has not a more famous supporter through the entire country than Mrs. Lovell, and she wears to-day a more becoming and elegant costume than any other woman in the town.

age such matters to suit themselves,—and for those who were particularly interested to make up their minds to be satisfied.

Ah, yes, that's it, Miss Lovell, if the young folks were only allowed to manage it themselves but there's that old Mrs. Lynes. I expect she's the one that managed this match.

Oh, it takes such a cunning old critter like her to surmount such an extraordinary young man as Mr. Paddieford.

At this, aunt Jemima's help, (Betsey Giddons,) spoke right up:

You are all out of the way there, Miss Truxton, for Sally Ann's mother had gone down to Wethersfield, to see her folks on a long visit, and never set her eyes on Mr. Paddieford till she got home, and heard from Sally Ann's own lips that she was engaged to him.

Why gracious goodness alive, Betsey Giddons, how you dew talk! What on airth then could have possessed the man to marry her?

Well, I'll tell ye, Miss Truxton, I expect that when Mr. Paddieford came to see what a nice girl Sally Ann was, love set in, and he couldn't live without her.

Why now Betsey Giddons, do you think love rarely set in?

I haint the least doubt 'bout it, responded the good-hearted Betsey.

Mrs. Truxton took a pinch of Scotch snuff from the rusty tin box, resumed her washing, and looked as though, after this she wouldn't be astonished at the confession of the world by a comet, or at anything else.

But cousin Lionel perhaps you would like to hear some of the particulars of the wedding? inquired my cousin, Mrs. Milly Lovell.

Nothing would please me better, I replied.

Well, we all had an invitation, and as your uncle and aunt hardly felt young enough to honor it, your cousin Aleck and I thought we would go. You know Lionel, that while Sally Ann is a most excellent girl and her father is a man of some means, they are still a very plain family, plainer indeed by several degrees than the average of us Nutmegvillagers.

When we got there, we found that old Mrs. Lynes, from some confused and bewildered notion that weddings and funerals were of the same order, had separated the sexes; Aleck was sent to the back room, and I was directed to the one in front. Here about twenty women sat as upright as stakes, and nearly as silent; and as we heard no sounds from the back room, we concluded that the "lords of creation" there assembled, were as much impressed with the solemnity of the occasion as we women were.

Presently I heard old Mrs. Parsells out in the entry, whispering to Mrs. Lynes on the absurdity of her having divided the men and women. "Twant no way to do, she said.

Why, inquired Mrs. Lynes in a suppressed tone, but loud enough to be heard, didn't Mrs. Sykes's folks have the men and women apart when they buried the old man?

Yes, yes, you goose, but wasn't that a funeral?

La saikes alive! said Mrs. Lynes, now fully aware of her error, so it was, and somehow I didn't think of the difference! Well, now Mrs. Parsells, do you please go in the room, and mix 'em up again, for I couldn't do it myself if it was to save our best cow.

At this, Mrs. Parsells came in, and with a good deal of bustle, unsorted the assortment as it then stood, and sorting us over afresh as well as she could, there was at length in each room, about an equal distribution of the sexes. The manœuvre served to oil the wheels of conversation a very little, for every now and then some of the company more courageous than the rest would venture on a question or a remark, but his temerity drawing all eyes on him he would soon shrink within his shell, in the self-complacent tho't that he had at least done his part toward sustaining the talk.

I was bold enough to ask old Mr. Spurge how his daughter, Hannah Maria, was?

Oh, she enjoys dreadful bad health, dreadful bad.

What do you think is the matter with her, Mr. Spurge?

Well, she's troubled with some complaint,—the bility or inility, or suthin' o' that kind. I forgot to remember just what they call it.

Don't you mean debility?

Ah, yes, that's it; it's the debility she has, I knew it was one of the bilities, but couldn't tell exactly which.

Under a profound sense of commiseration for Hannah Maria's unfortunate affliction with one of the bilities, I now drew in my horns and quietly awaited further developments.

After clearing his throat several times,—Mr. Sampson Finkes, who makes a considerable strain at being facetious, observed to Miss Helena Vickers a modest young lady:

So I understand that your minister has been getting married.

Miss Helena, not knowing what to make of the ridiculous remark, blushed to her eyes and said nothing. But her brother John who was as dry as Sampson was silly, took it up and replied:—

Yes Mr. Good has been getting married and has got five children already.

This set the folks to giggling, and the laugh was rather against Sampson, who supposed that the dialogue would have taken a different direction, but unwilling to relinquish his bantering joke, he persisted:

Yes, yes; but I mean he was married five months ago.

O, wasn't it no longer ago than that? I had forgotten the exact time, but perhaps you are right. It may have been five months said John, as if it was all a matter of course.

Mr. Vickers, you don't understand me. I mean that Mr. Good was married to the church, pursued poor Flukes, alluding to the settlement of Mr. Good over our parish,—which had taken place but a short time before.

But John had so entirely whittled away this wonderful witicism that Sampson must have been impressed with the conviction that he hadn't struck the right chord. And yet, in one sense, it seemed the right chord, for it furnished us with Mrs. Good, the pastor's wife, who had not yet arrived, as a topic for talk. Old Mrs. Runnels took the lead in this:

How do you think Mrs. Good has kept their hands of hers so white, with five children to bring up; and then there's them two rings on her fingers, as shiny as coals of fire; why, Mr. Broughton's Dick, who is clerk down in York, says they're real diamonds.

De tell if they be? inquired Miss Dorothy Tibbers, an old maid. Well, I guess the diamonds will get tarnished, and her snowy fingers siled a little afore she gets through with the Nutmegville people. Our parish aint no place for such fine ladies!

No, no, that aint, reiterated another. And that lace collar of hers—why there aint another such collar in the town. Ah, I guess Mrs. Good has some pretty high notions in her head.

I'll tell you one thing, said John Vickers, who had got considerably disgusted with the conversation. Mrs. Good may have some high notions in her heart, too; so high, that they wouldn't allow her to indulge in little tattling about her neighbors.

La, John, you needn't take it up so, replied Miss Tibbers. Mrs. Good aint no relation of yours, and besides haint we a right to see that the minister's wife walks pretty straight when we pay her husband five hundred dollars a year in clean money and don't compel him to take nothin' in garden sarse or prodous.

How far this dissection of a country minister's wife would have progressed, it is difficult to guess; but the subject of it, with her excellent husband at her side, now made her appearance, and I noticed that none were more ready to seek her smile than the three gossips, who a minute before were piecing-meal her.

The Lynes could have illumine their house with fifty spera candles as far as the cost was concerned but when the old lady's eyes were lighted "yaller taller," as Aleck calls them, on the mantle shelf of each room, she doubtless thought within herself that she had produced an extraordinary effulgence. They cast a dull, sickly glare over the company, and when Mr. Paddieford and Sally Ann came sailing down stairs to get married, with the bridesmaid and groomsmen at their heels, it would have been rather difficult to take a correct inventory of their figures.

You are aware, cousin Lionel, that sometimes a combination of circumstances will produce very droll results. It was so at the wedding.

You must know, first of all, that Mr. Paddieford, although employed as a teacher among us Congregationalists, is really an Episcopalian. There was, however, no Episcopalian minister very near us, and as Mr. Paddieford was considerably attached to Mr. Good, he was quite willing to be married by him, but he desired that the ceremony should be performed from the prayer book. To this Mr. Good assented, and Sally Ann in her interesting meekness of course made no objection.

Now please imagine Mr. Good as having progressed with the ceremony down to—for richer, or for,—and there for a minute we leave him.

One of Mrs. Lynes' help had taken one of the candles from the back room into the kitchen, and little Sophy Emmons, who had been suddenly seized with stomach ache, had been carried up stairs by her mother, and with them was taken the remaining back room candle. Still as the company had naturally crowded into the front room to see the ceremony, these luminaries were not particularly missed. But the "yaller taller" in the front room had begun to burn so dimly from an accumulation of charred wick, that the good Mr. Good had to look pretty sharp at his book, in order to get the words correctly.—Sampson Flukes noticing this, steps up to one of the candles with his usual officiousness, and snuffing it too low, snuffs it out.—Thinking perhaps of better luck next time, and not having the wit to first re-light the extinguished one, he steps to the other end of the mantleshelf, and has the same luck with this candle as with the former.

So there we were in perfect darkness just as Mr. Good, (as I said before) had got down to—for richer, or for—to be sure he managed to get out the word poorer, but at this point, from his lack of familiarity with the prayer book form, the poor man got stuck, and Mr. Paddieford and Sally Ann were only half married.

Where's the matches? where's the matches? inquired poor Flukes, half frightened to death while at the same time, Mrs. Lynes' voice could be heard yelling to Bridget the servant to bring a candle up from the kitchen. Aleck who sat by my side, shook with suppressed laughter, and altogether it was certainly a very comical concatenation of events.

After some delay Bridget made her appearance with a lighted "yaller taller," and must of course placed it on that end of the mantleshelf farthest from Mr. Good, on which Aleck, who had at length succeeded in putting on a straight face removed it to the end nearer the clerkwoman, and immediately after lighted the two which had been by Fluke extinguished. But through all these occurrences, so malapropos to the occasion, it happened that the worthy pastor lost his place in the ritual,—and when it is considered that it was his first essay in marrying from the prayer book, who can wonder? Sally Ann seemed almost ready to faint and Mr. Paddieford was so overwhelmed with confusion he was quite unable to tell where Mr. Good had left off, and in order to be on the safe side, a considerable portion of that which had been said previous to the temporary plague of Egyptian darkness, was repeated; and so at last, the parties were not only thoroughly married, but a little more than married.

When Mr. Good took his seat you would have thought he had earned his fee, for he sweated as though he had been mowing a field of wheat. But if there was a deficiency of light at Mr. Lynes', the profusion of eatables and drinkables was such as to be almost barbaric.

Do for a moment fancy delicate young ladies cramming themselves at a wedding with immense quantities of roast pig and roast goose, and turnips and onions boiled and pickled, fried sausages, and bread and butter. The tapering off was with such nice little minces as mince pies, Indian puddings, great chunks of pound cakes, cracked lickory nuts and cider.

Lynes prided himself on the solid character of this entertainment. He said that a little sip of lemonade and a pinch of cake wouldn't go far toward filling nobody's stomach, and was only suitable for gals from York.

After supper, the old man brought out his pipes, and he and several other old codgers had a regular smoke, right in the room where the guests were assembled. It seemed really too bad to fumigate us in this way, and yet I do suppose that had your uncle Lemuel been there he would have been as jolly a smoker as any of them.

Mrs. Lynes and Sally Ann being members of the church, of course we could have no dancing, but regular old fashioned romping games wound up the evening's entertainment. Pawns, forfeits and kissing kept the company in a tremendous roar, but in what respect these amusements are more pious than dancing, I never could fully comprehend. I have no taste for them myself, but Aleck, who loves fun of all kind joined in with the rest, and was uproariously noisy as he was able to be, when all of a sudden I observed him to back down and keep his seat.

On asking him the reason, he replied in a whisper that the ladies' breaths smelt so diabolically of onions, he could stand it any longer. We reached home at a late hour and so ended Sally Ann's wedding.

Cotton.

The nature of this plant is generally well known; it is a tap-rooted annual, tender, and when once bitten by frost never revivifies; suffers comparatively little from dry weather, and like everything else that vegetates, yields best on the best land.

In preparing land for cotton, we throw up beds, varying in width, according to the strength of the land from two and a half to four feet wide, and as high as can be thrown by a twister plow, the first furrow being run with a shovel. On these beds we "dibble," "space," or "spot," when seed are scarce, otherwise we run a furrow with a very narrow bull tongue, sprinkle in the seed and cover with a barrow or board. We generally have a good stand, in due time begin to plow the crop. This we do with "buzzard wings," or "sweeps," shaving the bed with one furrow on each side of the cotton. The beds are left perceptible as beds, and a small ridge is seen in the middles. The hoes follow the plows merely to scrape the tops of the bed, and thin or chop out, each hand doing about one and a-half acres.

When we return to this part of the crop again, we give but two, sometimes three furrows, with the same kind of plow, throwing out the small middles, and giving a little dirt to the cotton. The hoes follow the plows as closely as their proportionate number will allow, four out of every seven being plow hands.

This working is given a third time and the cotton laid by, more than six furrows being seldom given after the crop is up, unless the season is unusually wet, when a fourth working may probably be required. We always observe, however, never to use the plow when the fall of rain is a inevitably coming, or just after it has fallen, preferring to let our stock have the time to rest and the land as long to dry.

In the fall, we prefer to pick 150 pounds of cotton clean, than 250 pounds of cotton and trash. From the first picked we save our seeds, having no partiality for variety of cotton, planting principally the two excellent kinds, known here as Boyd's Profile and the Bunch Cotton.

We gin, pack and sell as soon as possible after harvesting, believing the weight of the freshly packed cotton and the saving of the interest of the money, to be in the aggregate more profit and less risk than waiting on the changes of fluctuating market.

Little Things.

If the lower box in your copper pump sticks fast, throw some hot water on the outside and expand the tube, then it will easily be removed.

If the top of your fluid lamp cannot be started, hold the outer portion in the steam of the teakettle and it will start.

If you wish to make the labors of your domestics easy, have a large scuttle with a trap-door in your back room, down which they can throw their dirty water on washing days, and let it pass off, if possible, into your barn-cellar through a covered drain.

If you are building a house, be sure and cover the upper part of the sill with a solid bed of mortar after it is boarded and the under floor laid. This will prevent the air from coming in beneath the boarding in the cellar, and more effectually prevent dead air within the walls. It will also prevent the rats and mice from ascending between the walls.

If you are a farmer, when you set a boiler for washing purposes, set another by its side of iron for other purposes. It will cost but a trifle more while you are about it.

If you feel nervous and sleepless on a bright moonlight night, shut out the light entirely.

If you wish to keep the female domestics happy, cut up two or three cords of wood into kindlings in the spring for summer use. They love something that will blaze well, but in small quantities.

If the plaster on your rooms has shrunk so as to show large cracks, before you paper your rooms, take a little plaster of paris, put it in a kettle and heat it over the fire to drive off the water; or, which is the same thing, take calcined plaster, put in equal portions of that and quick-lime and a little molasses with water, and with a case-knife fill every crack; an astonishing difference may often be noticed in the warmth of a room.

Can you tell for what purpose the eye of a sewing needle is grooved?

The Seckel Pear.

The Seckel is the best native pear known; it has a high, spicy, honeyed flavor. It bears its fruit in clusters at the ends of the branches. It ripens from the first of September to the last of October, according to the season.

It was sent to Europe by Dr. Hosack in 1819, and the fruit was pronounced by the London Horticultural Society, exceeding in flavor the best of their autumn pears. The fruit is very small, except on rich land. The following account is given of the origin of this pear.

About eighty years ago, there was a well-known sportsman and cattle dealer in the city of Philadelphia, who was familiarly known as Dutch Jacob. Every season, early in the autumn, on returning from his shooting excursions, Dutch Jacob regaled his neighbors with pears of an unusually delicious flavor, the secret of whose place of growth, however, he would never satisfy their curiosity by divulging. At length the Holland Land Company, owning a considerable tract south of the city, disposed of it in parcels, and Dutch Jacob then secured the ground on which his favorite pear tree stood—a fine strip of land near the Delaware.

Not long afterwards it became the farm of Mr. Seckel, who introduced this remarkable fruit to public notice, and it received his name.

Afterwards the property was added to the vast estate of the late Stephen Girard. The original tree still exists, (or did a few years ago) vigorous and fruitful. Specimens of its pears were quite lately exhibited at the annual show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Work and Thought.

It is no less a fatal error to despise labor when regulated by intellect, than to value it for its own sake. We are always in these days trying to separate the two; we want one man to be always thinking, and another to be always working; and we call one a gentleman and the other an operative; whereas the working man ought often to be thinking, and the thinking often to be working; and both be gentlemen in the best sense.

As it is we make both ungente, the one envying, the other despising his brother; and the mass of society is made up of morbid thinkers and miserable workers. It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy, and the two cannot be separated with impunity. * * * All professions should be liberal, and there should be less pride felt in peculiarity of employment, and more in excellence of achievement.—Ruskin.

Courting.

"I don't see why people cannot do their courting by day-light, thereby saving an expense of light, fuel and forenoon naps."—A breakfast table remark.

Where! preach that doctrine until your head is gray and you are toothless as a new-born babe, and still young folks will "set up" till the stars grow tired of watching and the roosters begin to crow!

There is a sort of fascination in it, a positive denial to the contrary notwithstanding. An indescribable, undeniable charm—charm in being the sole occupants of a front parlor, with nothing to molest or make afraid; the sofa drawn up before the shining grate, and the lamp regulated to a steady blaze that will not eclipse the brightness of eyes, or made particularly pleasing in hearing the last pair of household feet take a bee-line departure for the upper chambers, and feeling that the ever-swinging parlor, will remain closed until one of the party concerned chooses to open.

Talk of courting by day-light! I think of lancing one's arm by quick, hasty withdrawal from around a certain waist at the incessant ringing of the bell, or seeing the puff-comb and curls fly in every direction, by a round of coming footsteps. Imagine proud lover at the feet of fair lady puffing forth an elegant, long avowal, with extraordinary expressions flitting over the face; and at the same moment, a puzzled countenance peering through the folding door, wondering what makes Mr. M—"pray with his eyes wide open," and, more disagreeable still, have "mamma" open the door without the prelude of a rap, of course, just at the moment you have ventured to test the temperature and sweetness of her daughter's lips.—Margaret Verne.

Bank Note Paper.

A bank of England note has some peculiar and interesting characteristics of manufacture, the paper being distinguished by its color, which is a peculiar white, such as is neither sold in the shops nor used for any other purpose; by its thinness and transparency, qualities which prevent any of the printed part of the note being washed out by turpentine, or removed by the knife, unless a hole is made in the place thus protected; by its characteristic feel, a peculiar crispness and toughness, by which those accustomed to handle it distinguish the true notes instantly; the wire or water mark, which is produced on the paper when in the state of pulp, and which is easily distinguished from a mark stamped on after the paper is completed; the three deekle edges—the mould contains two notes placed lengthwise, which are separated by a knife at a future stage of the process; this deekle or wooden frame of the paper mould producing the peculiar effect seen on the edges of uncut paper, and this edging being caused when the paper is in a state of pulp, precludes any successful imitation after the paper is made; also by the strength of the paper, which is made from new linen or cotton. In its "water leaf," or unsized condition, a bank note will support thirty-six pounds; and when one grain of size has been diffused through it, it will lift a hundred weight.

A little more care was taken by our State government in regard to what sort of paper should be used in the printing of bank notes, the people would suffer much less, from the spurious stuff now in circulation,

QUINCY LYCEUM. The opening lecture for the season will be on Thursday evening next, by the Rev. Wm. Alger. Mr. Alger is a ripe scholar and a fluent speaker. He will deliver on this occasion his popular Oration on Dr. Kane, or the "Arctic Crusade," which has elicited universal admiration wherever repeated. The Lyceum commences under very flattering circumstances; a good number of our most eloquent speakers are held in reserve, and others are promised. Under its present judicious management we see nothing to prevent it from sustaining its former high character as an Institute for literary entertainments.

THANKSGIVING AMUSEMENTS. A Ball, the first of the season, will be given at the Hancock House on Thanksgiving Evening, under the direction of Professor Walker. As a musician and prompter, Professor W. has ever enjoyed an enviable reputation. The attractions thus thrown out, will, no doubt, draw together a large and fashionable party, who wish to close the pleasures of the day, in a merry and happy manner.

GOING AT AUCTION. Mr. Thompson Baxter who headed the Democratic ticket, as a representative from this town, has again resumed the auction business, as will be seen by his advertisement. By strict attention to business, and the interests of those who employ him, he hopes to receive a share of public patronage.

Queries. What about that Spanish Guitar? How is the batter, and when did he learn his trade? When is the young man a going to learn Landscape painting. ALBERT

THE ELECTION. In all but two towns, Mr. Banks has received 60,958; Gov. Gardner, 37,578; Mr. Beach, 32,046; Dr. Swan, 155. The total vote cast is 130,856. Banks plurality over Gardner, 23,380. Gardner and Beach over Banks, 5256.

THANKSGIVING. The Governor and Council have appointed Thursday, the 26th day of November, to be observed as a day of Thanksgiving in this State.

QUINCY CHARITABLE SOCIETY. The annual meeting of this Society was held on the 2d inst., at the house of the Rev. Nelson Clark, and the following persons were elected officers for the year ensuing, viz:

President—Rev. Nelson Clark.
Vice President—Dr. H. M. Saville.
Secretary—Mary J. Turner.
Treasurer—M. M. Frederick.

Directors—Mrs. Benjamin Curtis, Mrs. John Faxon, Mrs. Horatio N. Glover, Mrs. Eliza Baxter, Miss Ann Bass, Miss Ann Curtis, Mr. Benjamin Curtis and Dr. J. Marden.

The Society has assisted fifteen families the past year. The amount varying from $2 to $15.

Collected of members $77 73. Expended $81 63.

It is earnestly hoped that new members will be added to the Society, and thereby increase its usefulness.

THE HOOK AND LADDER COMPANY had quite a social gathering at their new house on Monday evening last; it was an old fashion turn out. We were honored with an invitation, but owing to a press of business relative to the election, were unable to attend. We regret it, as we missed a pleasant opportunity of bracing our nerves for the overwhelming disappointment which overtook us on the following day. The company was large including many invited guests, who had assembled to partake of the hospitalities of their generous entertainers. After refreshing the inner man, from a bounteous table, they adjourned over to the following evening, to be prepared for coming events, and in readiness to count their loss or gain at the ballot box, and to forget in the pleasures of the moment the toils and fatigues of an election struggle. Their second meeting was even more numerously attended than the preceding one, with the same liberal cheer awaiting them. Good humor prevailed. Toasts were freely offered, sentiments elicited and speeches made on various subjects—domestic economy, the progress of the age, and the importance of the discovery, to the cause of civilization, and the growth of the rising generation, in the article of "Granular Fuel." The festivities were closed with an animated dance, and the happy party separated with three hearty cheers for the return of another election, with three candidates in the field—an odd number of principles, to be jostled about on the political chess board. Prudence, gentlemen, at your next festival, please remember us, and we will sure to be there.

THE CURRENCY. Several of our leading commercial papers, since the suspension of the banks, have commenced agitating this question; and intimate that some of our most experienced financiers have the subject under grave consideration. The Boston Journal, for instance, is out in favor of a United States Bank, as a great national regulator in monetary affairs. For ourselves, we think a more simple remedy might be adopted, and with much better success. Let the banks call in all their notes under one hundred dollars; this would bring into circulation a currency adequate to meet all the wants of the madding classes. If our large trading establishments require houses of credit, they might have them. The Government has a regulator for such matters, provided by the Constitution, in the Mint at Philadelphia.

SPIRITUAL MEETING. Mr. Harris of Abington will speak on the subject of Spiritualism at Johnson's Hall to-morrow; the forenoon service will commence at 1-4-11, the afternoon at 2-1-4.

Political Imbecility.

The result of the election on Tuesday last appears to have taken all classes of politicians by surprise. None more so than the friends of Mr. Banks. They are beside themselves with joy. The Democratic victories which come rolling in from every quarter, and the evident change in public opinion which is telling so fearfully against them does not in the least abate their ardor. In their madness they already see their candidate in possession of the White House. What presumption! Mr. Banks is at the head of the Federal party of New England. A party which is in bad odor all over the Union. Its injustice and unfair dealings with other members of the Confederacy will never be forgotten or forgiven. Its numbers is now reduced to a very small point. Massachusetts would contain them all. It is fairly defunct. New York has sealed its doom. Be calm then gentlemen, exercise your reason, or we shall be obliged to reduce your diet with the application of a strait jacket.

DRY GOODS. We desire the particular attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs. George Turnbull & Co., of Boston, in another column. We do this because we consider that there never was a time when the public was so much interested in knowing where to get the most for their money, and in buying of trustworthy people. Besides an almost endless variety of linens, ribbons, embroideries, laces, &c., Messrs. Turnbull & Co. have an almost unequalled stock of those articles which may be ranked amongst the necessities of the approaching season—such as cottons, flannels of every kind and price, good warm medium-priced hosiery and gloves, shirts and drawers, woolen and worsted plaid, and cloakings—and we believe that, after an examination, our friends will heartily endorse our commendation.

GRANULAR FUEL. Who would do without it? Who that has tried it, can do without it? It enters so largely into our domestic comforts that it has become an indispensable article in almost every house and workshop. The Granular Fuel, at this season of the year, dispenses in a great measure, with the grosser and more expensive articles of fuel; and at all times, for the purpose of kindling, it is invaluable. Mr. Saville keeps his machine running constantly, to meet the increasing demands of the community, where it may be found in any quantity to suit the convenience of purchasers.

Housekeepers may not be aware that it is unsafe to use three-fourths of the Salutaris now sold as the pure article. There is no danger in using B. T. Babbett's as he manufactures all his Salutaris from common salt, on a new medicinal principle. It is also important that all interested should know, that B. T. Babbett's unadulterated Potash is the best article of the kind manufactured.

No housekeeper should be without it, as it is almost an indispensable article for domestic purposes. The high character Mr. B.'s Potash has attained, and the neat manner in which it is put up in Tin Cans, makes it preferable to any other kind in use. Manufactured and sold at 68 & 70 Washington street, New York, and 38 India street, Boston. For particulars see advertisements in another column.

DRUGS AND MEDICINES!
C. C. JOHNSON,
WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Quincy and vicinity, that he has opened a NEW DRUG STORE, in the GOODNOWS BUILDING, (Formerly occupied by Dr. J. Marden,) where he is happy to wait upon all who may favor him with their patronage, day or night.

His Stock and Fixtures are entirely new, and his Medicines have been selected with great care, and are warranted pure and genuine.

Mr. J.'s Powdered Articles are all fresh, as are his Herbs, and his Tinctures and Syrups have all been carefully manufactured here, and can be depended upon by physicians and others as being of the proper strength and purity.

His Stock of Chemicals is large, and comprises all the varieties usually found in a well equipped Apothecary Store. Of Patent Medicines, his Stock is large and varied, and will be enlarged from time to time, as new articles appear.

Of Perfumeries, Fancy Articles, Cigars, &c., a large variety of which he can sell as cheap as a genuine article can be purchased elsewhere.

With his large assortment of Drugs and Chemicals, Mr. Johnson is prepared to compound

Physicians' Prescriptions, as well and accurately as they can be prepared in any city in the United States.

He has secured the services of Mr. G. W. Gook, formerly with Mr. Spalding, Tremont street, Boston, who will act in the absence of Mr. Johnson from the Store with equal accuracy and correctness.

Mr. J. trusts by a strict attention to business, to merit a share of public patronage.

COMPLETE Dental Establishment.
DRS. CUMMINGS & FLAGG,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
25 Tremont Street, (up stairs,) Boston.

DRS. C. & F. having had extensive experience in every branch of practical and scientific Dentistry, and being conversant with the best known methods and latest improvements in the profession, feel qualified to perform all operations in a manner highly satisfactory to patients, and reflecting credit upon themselves.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH. By the improved principle of Atmospheric Pressure, teeth, from one to an entire set, are inserted firmly and beautifully, without the use of springs or clasps. Many beautiful specimens of Plate work, on gold, silver and platinum, are on exhibition at our Rooms, which, for taste, style and durability, we believe cannot be surpassed.

EXTRACTING TEETH. In this important and delicate branch of the profession, great care is taken to render the operation the least painful. By the application of a benumbing agent to the gum, the operation is performed with comparatively little pain. This new process of extracting teeth has been in use nearly two years, and we feel confident in recommending it to our patients and the public, as it is a great measure the dread which has heretofore existed, of dental operations. In some cases it entirely removes pain, while in almost all instances, it does much to contribute to the comfort of patients. The application of ether, which is entirely painless, is administered to those who desire it.

FILLING TEETH. This is the most difficult operation the dental practitioner has ever called upon to perform. It often requires great care and skill of operators who have been in practice many years. It is, when well performed, the most certain and only remedy that can be applied for the cure of decayed teeth. Being so effective, it must be executed in the most thorough and perfect manner. The preservation of a tooth, when well filled, and with suitable material, if it be afterwards kept constantly clean, may be regarded as certain. At any rate, it will never again be attacked in the same place by decay.

By the use of the new preparation of Crystal Gold, teeth are not only arrested from decay, and partially saved, but veritably restored to the form, comfort and utility of the original structure. By a wonderful property of gold, the metal, in its crystalline or precipitated state, by peculiar manipulation, passes

Miscellaneous.

The Mill in the Sea.

In olden times there once lived two brothers, one of whom was rich and the other poor. When Christmas was near at hand, the poor one had not so much as a bit of meat or a crust of bread in the house, so he went to his brother, and begged him, in God's name, to give him a trifle. Now, it happened that this was not the first time that the rich brother had given the poor one something, and he was not particularly delighted when he saw him coming.

"If you will do as I tell you, said he to the meek-looking visitor, you shall have a whole hog that is hanging up to be smoked."

The poor brother said he would do what he told him, and thank him too.

There it is, said the rich brother, flinging him the hog, and now go to the lower regions.

Since I have promised it, I must, observed the other, taking up his ham and going his way.

After wandering about the whole day, just as it grew dark he perceived a bright light at no great distance from him.

It must be here, thought he. On going somewhat further in the forest, however, he found an old man with a long white beard, who was cutting wood.

Good evening, said he, with the ham.

Good evening, replied the man; whether you be going.

O, I'm only going to the lower regions; only, I don't know whether I've come the right way, replied the poor, simple-hearted man.

Yes, you are quite right, said the old man, the entrance is just here; and then he added when you have got down below, they will all want to buy your ham, for swine's flesh is a great rarity there; but you must not sell it for money; so rather ask to exchange it for the old handmill that stands behind the door.

When you come up again, then I will teach you what to do with the mill; for it hath its use, I can tell you.

On entering the underground dwelling, everything happened just as the old man had told him. All the mops, great and small, gathered round, and began outbidding each other for the ham.

I had intended feasting upon it on holy Christmas eve, with my wife, said the man; but, as you seem so bent on having it, I am willing to part with it; but I will not take anything in exchange except the old handmill that stands behind the door.

The chief man did not at all relish parting with his mill, and began to huddle and bargain with the man, but the latter remained firm; so at last the man was fain to let him take the mill away. When the man had emerged from the underground dwelling, he asked the old wood-cutter how he should use the mill, and when he told him he thanked him and returned home; but let him make what speed he would, he did not reach it till twelve o'clock at night.

Where in the world can you have been? said his wife, as he came; I've been sitting here and waiting hour after hour, and I had not as much as a couple of spindles to lay across each other under the girdle pot, to cook our Christmas dinner.

O, replied the man, I could not come sooner, for I had some business to mind, and was obliged to go a long way about it. But you shall see what I have brought back with me.

He then placed the mill on the table, and made it grind, first of all, candles; then a table-cloth; then food and beer—in short, all that was wanting for a Christmas feast; and whatever he called for the mill ground it immediately. His wife stood by, and crossed herself many times over, and was very anxious to know how her husband had come by the mill. But this he took care not to tell.

It matters not how I got it, wife, said he; you see that it is a good mill, whose water does not cease to flow, and that's enough.

And then he ground entables and drinkables, and every possible dainty for Christmas week; and on the third day he invited his friends to a banquet. When the rich brother saw what a feast was in preparation, he turned hot and cold with vexation, for he grudged his brother the last windfall.

On Christmas eve, said he to the other guests, he was so miserably poor, he came to ask me for a trifle in God's name, and now, all of a sudden, he is as grand as if he had become an earl or a king.

Then turning to his brother, he said, where on earth did you get all these riches?

Behind the door, answered the other, who had no mind to let the cat out of the bag. But towards evening, when he had taken a drop too much, he could not keep his counsel any longer, but brought out his mill.

Here is the golden goose that has brought me all my riches, said he, and made the mill grind first one thing and then another. On seeing this, the brother wanted to buy the mill of him, but the other would not hear of it at first. At length, however, as his brother seemed to wish for it so very much, he said he would take three hundred pounds for it, if only he bargained not to part with it till harvest time; for, said he, I keep it till then, I shall be able to grind enough for many a year to come.

During this space of time, we may easily imagine that the mill was not allowed to grow rusty; and when harvest time came, the brother had it given him, only the other had taken good care not to tell him how he was to manage it.

It was evening when the rich brother bought the mill home, and on the following morning he told his wife that she might go into the field with the reapers, and that he would meanwhile prepare the dinner. Towards mid-day, therefore, he placed the mill on the kitchen table.

Grind away, said he, and let us have some herrings and a mess of milk of the best sort. So the mill began to turn out herrings and milk, till all the dishes, and pots and pans were filled, and at last the kitchen was completely flooded. The man kept twisting and turning the mill; but, do what he would, the milk did not cease grinding, and at length the milk had risen so high that he was in danger of being drowned.

He now tore open the chamber door, but it was not long before the chamber was like a mill; and it was with difficulty that he could wade through the milky tide, and manage to unfasten the latch of the house door. No sooner had he opened the door, than out he rushed, still pursued by a torrent of milk and herrings. And on he ran till he reached his brother's; and then he treated his poor relation, for God's sake, to take his mill back; for if it goes on grinding for another hour, said he, the whole village will be inundated with herring and milk.

The brother refused to take back the mill unless the other counted him out three hundred pounds more; and as there was no help for it, the rich man was fain to pay him the money. So, now that the poor brother had money as well as the mill, he built a house that was far handsomer than the one his rich brother inhabited. With the help of the mill he collected so much gold that he could cover the walls with plates of gold, and as the house stood near the shore, it could be seen shining from a great distance at sea. All who sailed near the coast were sure to anchor in the neighborhood, and to pay a visit to the rich man in the golden house, in order to see the wonderful mill.

One day a captain, who, like so many others, had come to see the mill, inquired after looking at it, whether it could grind salt.

Yes, it can grind salt as well as anything, said the man.

The captain then wanted to purchase it at any price. For, said he, if I had the mill, I should not be obliged to sail so far over the rough sea to fetch salt, and then I could make myself comfortable at home.

At first the man would not hear of selling it, but the captain teased, and teased so long, that he consented to part with it for many thousands of pounds. As soon as the captain had obtained the mill, he took care not to remain long in the neighborhood, for fear the man should repent of his bargain; so without stopping to inquire how he was to manage the mill, he went back to his ship and sailed away. On reaching the main sea he took out his mill, and cried—

Grind salt, and let it be prime stuff!

And the mill began to grind salt till it split and cracked again. When the captain found his ship was full, he tried to stop the mill, but, in spite of all his endeavors, the mill went on grinding, and the heap of salt grew higher and higher; till it finished by sinking the ship. So now the mill stands on the bottom of the ocean, and keeps grinding on at this very day, which is the reason the sea water is salt.

A Good Name.

Some time in 1838 or '39, a gentleman in Tennessee became involved, and wanted money; he had property and owed debts. His property was not available just then, and off he posted to Boston, backed by the names of several of the best men in Tennessee.

Money was tight, and Boston bankers looked closely at the names.

Very good, said they, but do you know General Jackson?

Certainly. Could you get his endorsement? Yes, but he is not worth one-tenth as much as either of these men whose names I offer you.

No matter; Gen. Jackson has always protected himself and his paper, and we will let you have the money on the strength of his name.

In a few days the papers with his signature arrived. The moment those Boston bankers saw the tall A and long J of Andrew Jackson, our Tennesseean says he could have raised a hundred thousand dollars upon the signature without the slightest difficulty.

So much for an established character for honesty. However men may have differed with Andrew Jackson politically, no man could deny him the merit of being an honest man.

Leather Scraps.

The manufacturers of leather, boots, shoes, harness, whips and port-manteaus afford a good deal of waste material that might be turned to good account in the village gardens.

The shoemaker almost always has a pile of leather scraps in front of his shop door. Sometimes they lie several feet in thickness in the streets. These wastes are among the most valuable fertilizers for grape vines and for all fruit trees. In some parts of England these wastes sell as high as four cents a pound. They decay slowly in the soil, and, like bones, impart their nourishment to the tree for a long term of years. In this country not one in a hundred knows anything of their value. The shoemaker probably buys manure from the stables, and throws a more valuable manure into the street.

Nothing can be easier than the gathering of these wastes. They can be had in most villages for the carting, and the owner is glad to be rid of them. Put these wastes around your vines and fruit trees, and they will soon turn into purple clusters and golden fruits.

Counting an Innocent.

In a very pretty little town, in one of the Western States, lives a very respectable middle-aged gentleman. He and his wife are excessively strict members of the Presbyterian Church, and they have endeavored to bring up their family in all that innocence, piety and ignorance of the world's follies, to which strict members of that church attach so much importance; in this they have most admirably succeeded.

The eldest daughter, having arrived at nubility age, had many visiting acquaintances, but none who had yet aspired to her hand, when a young gentleman from one of our Eastern cities passed through the little town in question. He bore letters of introduction to the father, from an old and esteemed acquaintance, and was thus at once admitted to the family circle. There he met with the daughter, and instantly fell captive to her quiet beauty.

He had proposed remaining but one day in the town, yet, before he returned to his hotel that evening, his resolution was taken. The day lengthened into a week, and the week into a month, and daily and nightly he visited the object of his passion. Often and often had the poor fellow thrown out hints, sufficient, as he thought, to betoken the state of his feelings, but somehow she would not take them.

They had often spoken of love, but she seeming to regard it in the Scriptural point of view, "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love," appeared never to have heard of any other phase of the passion.

At last, the suspense became intolerable, and he determined to know his fate. Dressed "to kill" he was at an early hour before her father's residence, and, on ringing the bell, as usual, conducted immediately to the drawing-room, where he fortunately found the young lady alone. Now was his time, he thought; so placing himself beside her on the sofa, he commenced:

Miss Emily, I am unfortunate. I have long felt the want of a friend; not a friend in the usual cold acceptance of the word, but one on whom I could rely, in whom I could confide, to whom I could pour out my whole heart, and receive in return sympathy and—

and—love. Could not you provide me with such as I desire?

The unsophisticated damsel raised her head, looked on him with a face of sympathizing innocence and replied:

Apply to the Saviour; I can on him; look to him for support, and rest assured he will never desert you.

The love-stricken youth, who at the commencement of her reply had had recourse to his pocket-handkerchief to stifle his laughter, calmed his feelings by the time she had finished, took a hasty leave, and the next morning put himself, bag and baggage, on the cars, fully satisfied that the most unprofitable way of passing time is in "courting an innocent."

Value of Fallen Leaves.

No manure is so well worth the saving in October and November as the falling leaves of the season. According to Payson, they contain nearly three times as much nitrogen as ordinary barn-yard manure; and every farmer who has strewed and covered them in his trenches late in the fall or in December, must have noticed the next season how black and moist the soil is that adheres to the thrifty young beets he pulls. No vegetable substance yields its woody fibre and becomes soluble quicker than leaves, and from this very cause they are soon dried up, scattered to the winds and wasted, if not gathered and trenched in or composted before the advent of severe winter.

As leaves are poor in carbon, and rich in alkaline salts, as well as nitrogen, they are especially valuable in compost with manure, fish manure and dead animals, poor in potash, but abounding in carbon and lime phosphates. But the great value of leaves is in the extra nitrogen they contain. Prof. Jackson truly says that the compounds of nitrogen not only decompose readily themselves, but they also induce the elements of other organic matter with which they are in contact, to assume new forms, or to enter into new chemical combinations; and according to the long-continued and varied Rothamsted experiments of the indefatigable Lawes and Dr. Gilbert, nitrogen, in its compound form (ammonia) also exerts the same potent influence on the inorganic or mineral elements of the soil, rendering even sand into the soluble food of plants. Yet every farmer or gardener ought also to know that his own mechanical aid in trenching or plowing in order to keep his soil permeable and also, as indispensable to aid nature in developing her chemical process.—Rural New Yorker.

No Water Power without Trees.

The North American Review quotes historical instances of once famous streams, now dried up in consequence of want of shade; and says:

"In an open country, the absolute quantity of water which the rivers discharge is not only less than in a wooded country, but the flow is incomparably more irregular and unequal. This week the stream may be a foaming torrent, forbidding all passage; next week it will be only a sluggish pool, which scarcely wets your horse's fetlocks. Since our Western lands have been cleared, the alterations in the "stage" of water in the rivers have been much more marked and violent.

The fact has been vexatiously brought home to our practical men by the constant hindrance of the mill-streams from freshness and droughts. Many water privileges which, half a century ago, were valuable and steady, have now become nearly worthless. The dam which was conveniently put up to saw an adjoining forest into profitable plank, now that its excellent work is done, will drive the saw in the summer no longer.

The good riparian mill-owners of one of the ponds in the vicinity of Boston remarked with amazement, some ten years ago, that the supply of water seemed to be failing them, and that the feeding stream had utterly dried up—a thing never known by the oldest inhabitant. Within a few few years the stream has regained its volume, and now flows full, even in the heats of summer. The secret of this was, that the water first disappeared on account of the cutting away of the forests about its source, a few miles distant, and returned when the young wood had grown there. Not a few of our larger factories have been compelled to introduce steam power to supply a deficiency in the volume of water, which a few years ago, was not troublesome. Indeed, the word "inexhaustible" can now hardly be used of any water-privilege in New England. We do not believe, though some high authorities maintain this view, that the cutting away of forests diminishes in any way the quantity of rain or snow! but we only contend that it deprives the moisture of its beneficent effects upon the earth, by causing it to be too rapidly absorbed.

tracted, and producing the pernicious alterations of frost and drought, which are as fatal to the health of the soil as to the health of the men who own the soil."

For the Patriot. The Orthodox Church.

MR. EDITOR:—The communication in your week before last paper, signed "Parish Committee," ably excoriates the published paper, which professes to be the Result of the late Council held by request of the friends of Mr. Clark, and exhibits the facts that relate to that controversy in the Orthodox Church, in an unvarnished manner, with perhaps a little too much acerbity, which only shows the intensity of the writer's feelings, and his determination to avoid that Pieswicker's style which has been said on the subject: for the plainest declarations it appears by the Metropolitan Council, are not taken in a Congressional sense, a mode of treating the subject which affords a convenient shelter to dissimulation, but we believe the public will agree with us that a cause which requires the perversion of language to sustain it, cannot have for its basis the solid foundation of truth.

Mr. Clark asserts that he, sometime since, made an offer to refer the subject, in dispute between him and the society to arbitration, to be mutually chosen. On the other side it is denied that such an offer has been made. The explanation is, that Mr. Clark wrote a paper embracing an offer of the kind stated, and put it into the hands of one of his friends to use as he might think proper; this paper was shown to a number, but was never sent to the society, for its action upon it. It was rather a suggestion made, than an offer proposed, and as it subsequently appeared, it did not embrace all the points in dispute. It seems never to have been pressed by either party. It was one of those doubtful movements which admit of just such a construction as either party chooses to put upon it.

It is very clear that the Orthodox Church here is now divided upon a principle, which must forever separate them, unless one of them recedes from its present position. The principle of one party is that the pastor is supreme; that wherever he is, there is the church; that no church meeting can be held without his permission; and it has been more than once declared by the pastor, himself, that a meeting so held is not valid. This is a species of absolutism which will not be very popular when the church wakes up to its necessary tendencies. The other party claims that the church is independent of the pastor and other organizations; that acts of a majority only are lawful and regular; that it can perform all the functions of its position with or without a pastor; it is in direct antagonism to the despotic claims of the other, and admits of no control but that of its own votes.

These divisions were partly shadowed forth in the two Councils that have assembled here. The one is in reality a modified Presbyterianism, and the other Congregationalism; and the latter is the democratic element of church government.

The party which assembles in the Town Hall, can be considered only as a separate church. It performs all the functions of the church; it admits new members and excommunicates such as it thinks proper; it performs all the religious ordinances, and claims all the rights of an independent church; in the late Council it claimed the authority to call a mutual Council, thus standing upon the assumption of being an entire church—such pretensions cannot be sustained by a mere minority. The idea of such pretensions is simply absurd, and it is a waste of words to attempt to defend such an assumption, the allusion of Doctor Albro to the Cambridge Platform does not sustain it, and we have never found any Congregational authority that does.

If then a part of those who once formed the Evangelical Church prefer a different government they have an undoubted right to form a new association and call themselves by what name they please, let them do so; and each part adopt its own course, without interfering with the other, and contention among members who were once united, in appearance at least, will cease, and peace may be restored. Formalism is not Christianity, and those who contend strongly for external things may be lamentably ignorant of its true and pure principles.

FRANKLIN.

The Neponset Turnpike and Bridge.

At the Annual Town Meeting in 1857, the Surveyors of the highways were instructed "To ascertain if the Town is liable for repairs on the Neponset Turnpike," said Committee would respectfully report;

"That on the 11th day of March, 1852, the Proprietors of Neponset Bridge were incorporated with authority to build a bridge over Neponset River, from Preston's Point in Dorchester to Billing's Rocks in Quincy, and a road from Quincy Meeting House, leading to said bridge. By the same Act the Corporation were authorized to take toll from the opening of said bridge for passengers, during a period of seven years, at the end of which time the bridge is to be delivered up in good repair to the Government for their use. Provided, also, that after forty years from the opening of the bridge for travel, the General Court may regulate the rate of tolls at the gate. On the 7th day of February, 1853, the Proprietors of Neponset Turnpike were authorized to construct their bridge, at Horse Hammock, instead of the place named in former Act; also to build a road from Quincy Meeting House leading to said bridge. By the same Act, it is provided that the inhabitants of the Town of Quincy shall pass and repass the road laying on their side of the river free of all burden and expense. The said Town of Quincy and the said Corporation shall keep the said road in repair in such proportions as they shall agree upon, or in case of dispute, the Justices of the General Sessions of the Peace in the County of Norfolk, shall, after hearing the parties direct. On the 22d day of March, 1853, an Act was passed to take effect October 1853, (forty years from the opening of the bridge for travel) establishing present rates of tolls at said gate, reserving the right to the General Court to regulate tolls on the said Bridge and Turnpike at any time hereafter, as the may deem expedient. Thus much for the action of the Legislature. Now as to the action of the Town.

It appears on record that on the 7th day of February, 1853, a town meeting was held at which the following vote was passed:

"Voted, That the Selectmen be a Committee for the purpose of waiting on a Committee appointed by the General Court to view the several roads proposed by the petitioners for a Turnpike Road and Bridge in the Town of Quincy. On the 29th day of August, 1853, a Committee consisting of Peter B. Adams, Joseph Baxter and Daniel Greenleaf made a Report to the Town, which was accepted and from which we extract the following:

"That the Town grant to the Proprietors of the Neponset Bridge all their title to the Old Road between the Blacks and the Stone Post, at the corner leading to Squantum, except that part leading to Mr. Jesse Fennell's and the Marshes, whenever the Corporation shall open their new road agreeably to their Act of Incorporation."

We find no other vote of the town relating to the matter.

Conclusion First: The Committee appointed by the Town, February 7th, 1853, could have had no influence in regard to the provisions of the Act as it was a law at the time they were chosen. Hence the anomalous provision in regard to the repairs of the road. The Corporation framed its own Bill.

Second: The General Court had not the constitutional power to compel the Town to raise money to repair a toll road and bridge.

Third: That the Town as a matter of equity should contribute no more for repairs of the Turnpike than they would have been compelled to expend for repairs of that part of their own road which was discontinued at the opening of the Turnpike by the arrangement and agreement of the several parties.

Fourth: That the Town has contributed its equitable share towards the support of the Turnpike from the opening to the present time.

Fifth: That the Corporation having refused on demand made to reimburse any part of money expended by the Town for removal of snow from their Turnpike during the last winter, and by their refusal to repair a part of their Turnpike, on the alleged ground that the Town is liable for its repairs; thus basing their claim and demand of the Town on law instead of equity, as heretofore, and believing, as we do, that the Corporation has no legal claim on the Town for repairs of any part of their road. We recommend that the Town hereafter allow and require the Corporation to keep their Turnpike road in repair at their own expense and that Surveyors expend no more of the Town's money for repairing said road.

Respectfully submitted,

Cheerfulness.

O, how I like a cheerful, sun-shiny face. It is perfectly refreshing to meet a cheerful man with his face covered all over with a broad honest smile. Such a face is always an index to a generous and kind

Poetry.

If your Foot is Pretty, Show It.

If your foot is pretty show it,
No matter where nor when;
Let all fair maidens know it,
The foot take all the men.
The face, so fair and lovely,
May charm the gazer's eye,
But if the foot is homely,
He'll quickly pass her by.

If your foot is pretty, show it,
When you trip along the street;
For it will catch the eager eyes
Of every man you meet.
Don't toss your glossy ringlets,
Nor pout your lips so sweet;
But gently lift your petticoats,
And show your handsome feet.

If your foot is pretty, show it,
At concert, ball, or fair;
For the small, dainty foot,
Tells where the graces are.
The figure may deceive me,
Other things may deceive me;
All hoped and padded over;
But let my eye survey the foot,
I ask to see no more.

If your foot is pretty, show it,
If you wish to catch the beaux,
No longer hide the tell tale charm
Beneath so many clothes.
A graceful foot betrays a form,
Of rare and faultless grace;
Full rounded limbs it doth reveal,
For fancy's eye to trace.

If your foot is pretty, show it,
Yes, show it when you can;
Twill help your other lovely charms,
To win some nice young man.
The practical eye may well distrust
A nicely padded breast;
But when it rests upon your foot,
It knows of all the rest.

Good Night

Two little words, and quickly said,
But in each tone there lies
A quiet exhortation, and a world
Of tender memories.

I often think at close of day,
As its last gleam departs,
When sweetly the twilight peace
Is stealing o'er our hearts—
And as the stars look down on earth,
Beneath their solemn light
How many fond and loving lips
Are hushing, Good night.

Good night! I am a child once more
Upon the hill of play;
I hear my mother's gentle voice
Calling her boy away.

Bed time has come, alas! too soon,
And with reluctant feet
The child turns homeward and where that voice
Is speaking low and sweet.

The loving kiss, the bending down
Of kind and loving faces,
The childish prayer impetuously said,
Her soft good night embrace.

O time and change, while yet I live,
Take all I have beside;
If you but leave the memory
Of that calm evening.

When I shall say to listening friends,
My last good night on earth;
And those near the Father send
To watch the spirit's birth.

O may the smile my childhood knew,
Be my glad sight again,
And that dear voice I loved so well
Bid me good morning then.

November.

The wild November comes at last Beneath a veil of rain;
The night wind blows its folds aside—
Her face is full of pain.

The latest of her race, she takes
The Autumn's vacant throne;
She has but one short month to live,
And she must live alone!

A barren realm of withered fields,
Bleak woods and fallen leaves;
The pale moon that ever dawns;
The dreariness of eves.

It is no wonder that she comes,
Poor month! with tears of pain;
For what can she so hopeless do
But weep and weep again!

Anecdotes.

I say, Pat, what is the difference between being hung on a gallows like a gentleman, and being hung on a gibbet?

Sure, an' in the first place a man hangs only a trifle of an hour or so, and in the other he hangs all the days of his life!

What has brought you here? said a lone woman who was quite flustered by an early call from a bachelor neighbor who lived opposite, and whom she regarded with peculiar favor.

I come to borrow matches.
Matches! that's a likely story! Why don't you make a match for yourself? I know what you come for, said the exasperated old woman, as she backed the bachelor into a corner, you came here to kiss me almost to death! But you shan't unless you are the stronger, and the Lord knows you are.

A man very much intoxicated was sent to jail. Why don't you bail him out? asked a bystander.
Bail him out! exclaimed the other, you couldn't pump him out!

You haven't opened your mouth during the whole session, complained a member of the Legislature to a quiet representative.
O, yes, I have, was the reply, I yawned during the whole of your speech.

Mr. Jones don't you think marriage is a means of grace?
Certainly! anything is a means of grace that leads us to repentance.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having
some reliable standard for the strength of POT-ASH. The adulteration has become so general,
that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of ascertaining his own, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated
with salt, which is destructive in making soap,
it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so troublesome to handle, being put in wooden casks, and becoming so hard in many cases, it is very troublesome to the retailer.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes,
always being the same strength, and producing
the same results; and will warrant it in all cases,
if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soaps, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cost 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Laundries and Hotels.
Directions for cleaning cotton waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sulphur.

BEST SALEBRATUS,
Is prepared entirely different from other salebratus,
in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cakes, without containing a particle of saleratus when the strength for cake is baked; thereby producing wholesome results. Every portion of Salebratus is formed to Gas and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains in the Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive, by the taste of this Salebratus that it is entirely different from other Salebratus. When you purchase one package you should take the label paper with you, and be very particular and get the exact copy like the first, (name and picture, twisted, Lead-bread, with a glass effecting water on the top, as you see in the label.)

action, causing neither vomiting or purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease, regulates the blood, removes all morbid accretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver, and corrective tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that feeling of languor which is often experienced in the Spring, and restores the vigor and strength, restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.

In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofulous
Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas,
Scald Head, Tumors, Ulcers, &c., &c., &c., Sore Throat, Inflammatory Rheumatism, Fever,
Scurvy, White Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Barber's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eruptions or Eruptions on
the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.

It is also an effectual cure for Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Constipation, and Derangement of the Urinary Organs, and all diseases of the Blood.

It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and other diseases peculiar to FEMALES, such as

Miscellaneous.

I'll Call around and Pay.

What is this? said Mr. Redwood as with an indolent, half-indifferent air, he took a folded paper from the hand of a boy. The day was Saturday; the hour about one.

Of yes, I see, he added a moment afterward. Very well, say to Barker I'll call around and pay him. Can't attend to it just now.

Mr. Redwood's fire-proof stood only six feet from the place where he was sitting; the door was wide open; the check-book in sight; and the balance in the bank was just four thousand dollars. It would have taken only a slight effort, and consumed but two minutes' time for him to have drawn a check for sixty-eight dollars and fourteen cents—the amount of Mr. Barker's bill. But he was so much in an indolent frame of mind, and it was so much easier to say, "I'll call around and pay," than rise from his quiet position, and go to all the trouble of writing a check, and taking a receipt.

The boy looked disappointed, and lingered a moment.

Did you understand me? said the merchant sharply.

Yes sir; but—

But what?

It is Saturday, sir; and—

I didn't figure of you as to the day of the week, was testily answered.

The boy looked half-frightened, and went away instantly.

Saturday, indeed! muttered Mr. Redwood to himself. A rare piece of information! A bright boy, really! What was Saturday to do with the payment of my shoemaker's bill?

Did you get the money of Mr. Redwood? asked the shoemaker, as the boy came in.

His face had an anxious look.

No sir. He says he'll call around and pay.

When?

He didn't mention any time; replied the boy.

Did you tell him it was Saturday, and I had my workmen to pay off?

I tried to, sir, but it seemed to make him angry; as he is a good customer—

Too bad, too bad! ejaculated the shoemaker, breaking in upon the boy's words. Call around and pay! Why didn't he send the money? That would have been easier.

Rising from the bench, the shoemaker went to his little unpainted pine desk, on which was a little square cork ink-stand and the stump of a quill, five inches long, which was dignified by the name of a pen, and took therefrom a package of bills. He went over them twice before selecting one, for there seemed little promise for that day in any of them.

Take this to Mr. Glenn, said he to his boy, and tell him that he will particularly oblige me if he will let me have the money. Say that I would not trouble him again, but it is Saturday, and I have my workmen to pay.

The boy was gone nearly half an hour; Mr. Glenn's store was in a distant part of the town, though his family, for which Mr. Barker worked, lived in the neighborhood. A dozen times before he came back had the anxious merchant paused in his work, and fixed his eyes upon the door, hoping for his boy's return. At last he came in.

Well, Andrew what success? He tried to speak cheerfully.

Mr. Glenn says he will call around and pay.

The shoemaker's countenance fell. He let his eyes drop to the work in his lap, and bent his face downward so that his expression might be partly concealed from the boy.

very still upon his bench. Then rising slowly, he referred again to his package of unsettled bills.

Suppose you try Mr. Wharton again? The boy shook his head, remarking with some familiarity of manner:

Poor chance there! He's going to call around and pay these three months.

When did you see Mr. Winton? asked the shoemaker.

Last week.

What did he say?

That he would call around.

Call around! It's only a get off! I'm out of patience! And the perplexed shoemaker grew excited. They're all eager enough to get their work, and sharp-spoken enough if it isn't ready to the minute. But when it comes to paying, the matter is of too little consequence to claim their attention. Ah! here's Mayberry's account; he had been running over the bills as he talked. Didn't he promise to settle to day?

Yes sir, I think he did, replied the boy.

Very well. Hurry around to the store and catch him before he goes to dinner.

The lad started off with his usual alacrity, and Barker sat down again to work and wait.

No money, the shoemaker read disappointment in the boy's face.

No sir.

Why?

Mr. Mayberry said he had just deposited everything for the day, and that he couldn't draw a check for so small an amount. Would you pay on Monday.

A thin, pale, weary looking woman opened the shop-door at this moment, and came in. She carried a basket on her arm, from which she took a bundle of "uppers" that she had taken to bind.

Here is the work, Mr. Barker, she said in a dejected voice. I hope you will find it all right. They were ready two days ago, but my husband is very sick, and I've had to be up all night with him for three nights.

The shoemaker did not see the quality of the work as he took the "uppers" from the woman's basket and made a show of examining them. He was only thinking of the woman's need and expectations. She had performed her part, but not a single dollar had he in the house and how was he to perform his part.

How is your husband to-day? he asked kindly, showing more than sympathy to give.

Not so well, replied the woman. I have run for a few minutes, and left him alone quite as much to get the money for my work as to bring it home. The doctor has ordered a little wine, and I must get it for him, if it takes all I have earned this week.

How much does your work come to?

Two dollars, answered the woman.

The shoemaker went to his desk, and opening it, took out his little cash box, and made a pretence of disappointment as he turned it towards the woman. It did not contain a single copper. Then every compartment was examined, but with no better success.

You are a little too early, Mrs. Blythe, he said, smiling, yet regretfully, a little too early.

I haven't received my collections for the day. Shall I send you up the money?

The woman sighed and looked very much disappointed.

I'm very sorry, Mrs. Blythe—the shoemaker did not manifest the slightest impatience, for he understood the case perfectly—but we find it very hard, sometimes, to get in our bills. I've had Andrew running all the morning, and he hasn't collected a single dollar so far. It's strange how little rich men think of their obligations to us poor mechanics, who live nearly all the while from hand to mouth. If I could always get in my small bills I would be very comfortable. As it is, I am always in trouble about money.

Mrs. Blythe stood very still and answered not a word. It was hardly possible for her to leave her husband again, and moreover, she had promised to bring home the wine.

I am very sorry, Mrs. Blythe, repeated the shoemaker; but what is, cannot be helped.

True, true. I learned that long ago, said the woman, with a half despairing sigh. The lessons of poverty sink deep enough into the memory.

I will send you up some money in the course of an hour or two. Andrew is going out with some more bills. I will not trouble you about coming down again as your husband is so ill.

Still Mrs. Blythe lingered. How could she return to her sick, exhausted husband, without the wine that was to send through all the courses of his blood a quickening spirit! She had felt as if this wine was to be to him the very elixir of life, and since it had been mentioned by the doctor, she had seen that her husband's thoughts were resting upon it, to the exclusion of everything else.

To go home, without it, therefore, was a serious thing, and might involve serious consequences; for his condition was one of extreme prostration, and the slightest cause might destroy the even balance of life just attained, and throw a preponderance upon the wrong side.

Slowly, at length, she moved towards the door.

You will send the money up right soon, she said, turning partly around, and looking back at the troubled shoemaker.

The moment I receive it. Andrew is going out with some bills immediately.

The door opened noiselessly; with noiseless steps a drooping figure went out, and noiselessly the door was shut again. The only sense that took record of the circumstance was that of sight.

Mr. Redwood, the merchant, who thought his shoemaker's bill of so little consequence that he would not take the trouble to draw a check to cancel it, left his store some two hours after the visit of Andrew, and started home to his late dinner. On his way he passed a wine store, and dropped in to order a case of choice Anonitlodo, the flavor of which he had tried and approved.

Send it home within an hour. I wish a bottle for my dinner, said Mr. Redwood, as he took out his pocket-book to pay for the wine.

It shall be done, was the ready answer.

As the merchant replaced his pocket-book and was buttoning his coat over his breast, a poorly dressed, worn and feeble looking woman came into the store, and walked back with an air of timid irresolution, to where the two men—the wine dealer and his customer were standing.

Well, what's wanted? said the wine dealer in a short, imperative voice.

My husband is very low, and the doctor has ordered him some wine. The woman's said, pleading tone, made it very apparent to the dealer that she came to beg and not to buy.

Has he indeed? The voice of the wine dealer was half-insulting.

I failed to get my money for my work, and I cannot go home without the wine. O, sir, if you'll trust me for a bottle, I will certainly come and pay you! The money is earned and it is promised to me this afternoon.

The wine merchant laughed, sneeringly, as he made the answer:

It won't do, my good woman! The trick is too stale.

But, sir—

The urgency of the case made Mrs. Blythe importunate.

There—there! That will do! Go now! and the wine merchant waved his hand toward the door, impatiently. Mrs. Blythe turned and went away, not speaking another word. The eyes of Mr. Redwood were on her pale, thin face, and he saw there an expression that haunted him, as we are sometimes haunted by a face in a picture for many days afterward.

A common dodge, said the wine merchant, in a vulgar way, as the woman passed into the street. If I had given her the bottle of wine, she would have been drunk as a beast in half an hour.

Mr. Redwood, in whose memory that parting look of Mrs. Blythe had daguerreotypied itself, thought differently; but he gave no utterance to his thoughts.

That woman's story was a true one, he said to himself as he passed on his way homeward. I wish I had asked her residence; and he looked carefully all around him, up and down the street, with a kind of vague hope of seeing her. But already too long away from her exhausted husband, she had hurried back to him with almost flying feet.

Oh, Mary, whispered a feeble voice as she leaned over the bed, how long you have been away! I feel very faint, very faint! Have you got the wine?

Only the bitter wine of sorrow crushed out of an almost breaking heart, had she brought for her husband, and as a few drops fell upon his face, she whispered back huskily:

Mr. Barker could not pay me for my work. But he will send the money in an hour or two, and then I will get the wine.

A feeble sigh fluttered across the breast of the sick man; his lids drooped wearily until the lashes lay in two dark lines upon his bloodless cheeks; while a more deathlike hue overspread his countenance.

Edward! Edward! On, Edward! Husband!

Slowly the eyes of the sick man opened, but closed again, heavily, without sending forth a beam of intelligence.

The poor woman's strength was all gone. Sinking in the chair, she leaned over upon the bed, and laid her face against that of her husband. Its coldness chilled her to the heart. A ready death damps were breaking upon the relaxing pores. A moment she tried to arouse herself to a new effort. But hope had died, and the leaden pall of despair was upon her spirit.

Ms. Blythe!

It was the voice of Andrew, the shoemaker's boy, whose master had borrowed the money to relieve the pressing wants of the poor woman.

Mrs. Blythe! His hand was upon her arm but she stirred not.

Mrs. Blythe! I have brought you the money for your work. And Mr. Barker has sent a bottle of wine for Mr. Blythe.

The voice and words penetrated the shut door of the woman's senses, and, partly arousing herself, she murmured, as a fuller consciousness returned:

Too late! too late!

A thrill of horror went through the boy's frame, as bending over, his eyes rested upon the ashen face of a man wearing the ghastly hue of death.

How little dreamed the well-to-do merchant of a scene like this, as he sipped his delicately flavored sherry, and remarked upon its quality! Of a scene like this, which an easy act of justice on his part, in the simple payment of a bill, might have prevented!—Once as he looked at the wine, holding his glass to the light, the countenance of the poor woman he had seen at the wine merchant's seemed to glare at him, as if reflected from a mirror. But the unpleasant vision faded in a moment. Between that despairing countenance and his failure to pay a trifling bill, he recognized no possible relation of effect and cause. Yet it was even so! The relation did exist.

Need we give any new shades to our picture? need we turn the kaleidoscope? need we add a word by way of application? what good? The lesson is complete enough, and all additional groupings or colorings would but weaken the moral we seek to enforce.

[Reader, are you entirely guiltless in this matter? Are there not employers whose experience corresponds with the above through your negligence in meeting? claims which you acknowledge to be due, yet put off the payment from time to time for the most trivial causes?

Customs of various Nations.

The Maldivian Islanders eat alone. They retire to the most hidden parts of their houses, and draw down the cloths which serve as blinds to their windows, that they may eat unobserved. An absurd reason may be alleged for their unsocial repast; they will never eat with one who is inferior to them in birth, in riches or dignity; and as it is a difficult matter to settle this equality, they are condemned to lead this unsocial life.

On the contrary, the inhabitants of the Philippines are remarkably sociable. Whenever one of them finds himself without a companion to partake of his meal he runs out to meet with one; and he never even his appetite may be, he ventures not to satisfy it without a guest.

The tables of the rich Chinese shine with a beautiful varnish, and are covered with silk carpets very elegantly worked. The master of the house absents himself while his guests regale at his table with undisturbed revelry. They do not make use of plates, knives or forks, but their food is served up in dishes, out of which they eat in common; and for this purpose every guest has two little ivory or ebony sticks, which he handles very dextrously.

The Otahitians, who are lovers of society, and very gentle in their manners, eat separately from each other. At the hours of repast the members of each family divide; two brothers, two sisters, and even husband and wife, have each their respective basket.—they place themselves at the distance of two, three yards from each other; they turn their backs, and take their meal in profound silence.

Among the greater part of the American Indians, the host is continually on the watch to solicit his visitors to eat but touches nothing himself. In New France the host wears himself with singing to divert the company while they eat.

The Tartars put a man by the ears, to press him to drink; and they continue tormenting him, till he opens his mouth; they then clap their hands and dance before him.

Large Things in the United States.

The largest cataract is the Falls of Niagara, where the united waters of the upper great lakes form a river three quarters of a mile broad, which is suddenly compressed and plunges over rocks at a height of a hundred and sixty feet.

The largest river in the world is the Mississippi, which is four thousand miles long.

The largest valley in the world is the Mississippi valley, which contains over 500,000 square miles, and is one of the most fruitful regions on the globe.

The largest lake in the world is Lake Superior, four hundred and thirty miles long.

The largest natural bridge in the world is that of Cedar Creek in Virginia. It crosses a precipice of two hundred and fifty feet depth and eighty broad, at the bottom of which the stream flows.

The largest mass of iron in the world is the iron mountain in Missouri, the Pilot Knob—it is two hundred and thirty feet high and two miles round.

The largest railroad in the world is the great Illinois Central, which is seven hundred and thirty-one miles long and cost $15,000,000.

The greatest number of miles of railroad to a mile of surface in any country in the world is found in Massachusetts, which has more than one mile of railroad to every square mile.

The greatest number of clocks fabricated in the world, is made in the little State of Connecticut.

The greatest number of whale ships in the world are sent out by Nantucket and New Bedford.

The greatest port for the exportation of grain in the world is Chicago.

The largest aqueduct in the world is the Croton Aqueduct at New York. It is forty one miles long and cost $1200,000,000.

Panic Sermons.

Quite a number of clergymen entertained their hearers recently, on the Lord's day, with sermons on "The Crisis." Sunday being a day when men are expected to have a respite from their ordinary cares and avocations, it would seem but reasonable that thought should be permitted and assisted to take a new channel. But no; the panic must still be continued, and while the men are pondering their desks in developing the religious aspects of the subject, the practical intellect unavoidably reverts to an accumulation of unsalable merchandise, an enormous bank account, or the unsatisfactory state of the ledger—and perhaps becomes fearfully apprehensive of impending financial disaster, as the effect of this perpetual ding-dong, seven days in the week, while the intended "improvement" is quite forgotten. The custom is becoming too prevalent, of lagging everything into the pulpit. A closer examination of the volume will disclose topics and scope sufficiently ample for our most eminent modern divines, without resorting to that description of clap-traps, while, it may distinguish the preacher, extinguishes his usefulness.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Result of Council in Quincy.

From the Congregationalist.

This document, (published on page 4th,) has bearings so important on the general interests of Zion as well as those of more local character, that a friend to all parties concerned, may perhaps be allowed to ask of its readers, a simple expression of approval or dissent on the case, till time shall be had to gather up the facts, examine principles, and suggest arguments which sustain other views than those indicated by the "Result."

The reasons for wishing this suspension of judgment are briefly these:

1. Though the Council whose deliberations have led to the "Result" in question, was composed of highly honored and beloved brethren, they were clearly not in a position that allowed them a fair view of the whole matter in controversy; the correctness of their judgment therefore may fairly be questioned.

2. The "letters missive" convoking the Council unlawfully starts with a falsehood—whether intended or not, God will judge. It purports to have come from "the Evangelical Congregational Church in Quincy;" that church sent no such letter, nor knew of it being sent, till the day on which the Council convened; it was prepared and sent on its missive by a one-third minority of the church, headed by one believed to be a regularly dismissed pastor, without notice being given to the majority.

3. Other false statements were palmed on the Council—without evil intention it is hoped—which in due time will be exposed, if God permit.

4. The letter requests the Council to "consider and judge of the character and validity of these proceedings" (referring to "recent transactions," not named) "and render such advice as in view of the facts and circumstances shall seem meet." The "proceedings" it is presumed from the tenor the Result, involved alike the doings of the church, pastor and ex-parte Council. On all these doings the Council ventured to act, on the sole ground of ex-parte testimony—Not a member of the ex-parte Council so far as is known, was notified of the calling or business of this "Quincy Council," nor had opportunity to defend its action; nor was a single member of the two-thirds majority of the church invited to be there; and if two or three were present, it was only to gratify the innocent curiosity awakened by their knowledge of certain men and things, there to be exhibited; the Scribe of the Church was not there—the Clerk of the Society was not there; no one was there authorized or invited (unless the Moderator threw out a general invitation during the session) to utter a word in defence of the church or ex-parte Council. The statements on which the Quincy Council acted, whether written or verbal were those and only those of Mr. Clark and his friends; these they assumed to be true and fair, and proceeded to act upon them as promptly as if they had been established verities.

5. In regard to the church meeting in the vestry, on which so much stress is laid by the Council, far from one-half the truth was told, nor could it have been told with safety to the pastor's cause; but the facts were before the ex-parte Council, and in view of them their judgment was made up; and still their doings are pronounced "invalid" by this body, on purely ex-parte testimony! It was proved before the ex-parte Council to their satisfaction, that a mutual Council was demanded more than once, both by the church and society, and as often refused or evaded; nor was it till "insult added to injury" had exhausted forbearance, that the church resolved to summon an ex-parte Council. Never was a Council, it is believed, more regularly called or constituted; nor ever was a Council more "affectionately desirous" of healing existing divisions, or terminating them, to the benefit of both parties—as facts will hereafter show.

6. The constitution of the ex-parte Council deserves notice, in contrast with the constitution of the "Quincy Council." The first was composed almost exclusively of ministers and churches in the immediate vicinity—members of the same Association and Conference with Mr. C and his church—brethren who have long known and loved him and his people, and love him still, notwithstanding all unpopularity, though he counts none his enemies. These are country ministers and churches, to be sure, and are, perhaps, quite unenlightened, though presumptuous enough to think they know something about matters of common sense and church order. The second, or "Quincy Council," was composed mainly of city ministers and churches—all in Boston, or cities and towns North or West of Boston, and not one from the region where Mr. C. and his friends are best known. Were these brethren, erudite, polished, logical and eloquent, probably selected as the only fitting prelates of the pastor of the Evangelical church of Quincy? But is it "Congregational usage" to pass by neighbor churches, and go to churches far off for advice in difficulties between a pastor and his church? These metropolitan brethren, who have kindly given us so much information as to church usage, will do good service by setting forth the creation here proposed.

7. One false statement has been already specified, and others charged on this result; to another and raisomer we are bound to allude, not, however, to implicate the Council, for the responsibility rests, it is presumed, on the agent who procured the publication of the journal. The style of it is—"The Result of an Ecclesiastical Council." Now the truth is, it was no Ecclesiastical Council at all, on any principle of Congregationalism. That system knows no other than three kinds of Councils—Associated Councils, maintained no where, it is believed, except in a part of Connecticut; and mutual or ex-parte Councils were certainly neither mutual nor ex-parte, nor is it pretended to be so by its members; for one of them writing to a friend on the subject, says explicitly, that "it was neither a mutual nor an ex-parte Council in the proper sense;" and if it were neither, in a proper sense, it was none at all, for Congregationalism knows nothing of improper Councils; it requires rule and order, and forbids irregularity and lording it over God's heritage; this Council was neither called nor formed according to rule, but in violation of all rule; its proceedings were not in Congregational order, any more than are the proceedings in a Popish inquisition; it entertained accusations against absent parties, whose attendance was not asked—received testimony only from the accusers—and condemned the accused to the forfeiture of public confidence.

8. By no possibility can the Result of an anomalous body, like this, founded on a series of false assumptions, and a mass of unauthenticated testimony subjected to no cross-examination, operate to the advantage of either party concerned. As to its convincing the ex-parte Council of wrong doing, or the little church of Quincy, that they have abused the liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free, or the churches and ministry at large, that any minister may rightfully hold a people to his support, by a strong will, when two-thirds of them oppose him on principle, compelling them, by civil prosecution to pay his salary, after they have renounced his services, it will have no more power than an insect's wing to shut off from the light of heaven.

Hard Times.

BY MRS. C. A. HAYDEN.

Hard times has come upon us with a vengeance people say,
'Tis a question with the many how they'll live from day to day?
Speculation somewhat nonplussed, the currency quite bad,
They who jogged along securely at even pace before,
Now fancy want's grim visage will be peering thro' the door,
Aristocracy is shaking already in its shoes,
The rich man wants his loan, the poor man wants his dues:
It costs so much for luxuries, so much for actual wants,
And O! the artificial ones, lord, how the prospect daunts.

My lady in her boudoir, clad in velvet, silks and laces, Clasps her jewell'd fingers moodily and makes a few dry faces:
She don't know what curtaining means—she won't give up a thing,
Such a proposition wounds her, she cannot bear the sting.

Up and down the parlor Miss is pacing to and fro,
There's to be a brilliant party—she's been told
she cannot go:
She'd like to know the reason Pa's making such a fuss?

'Tis mighty disagreeable to be disappointed thus.
Here's a letter too from brother, another college debt,
Lord! won't he rave and swear when the needful he don't get?

Perhaps his popularity is getting rather low There's nothing in the world like gold to make a fellow go.

The moneylender aristocracy know what curtaining means,
They are used to business details, are allowed behind the scenes;
They'll make a mightier effort, a more o'er-whelming strain, They'll come down, and 'tis a question if they'll s'er get up again?

Let me tell you three per cent a month is a very small affair,
No wonder that your faces such a glum expression wear:
Or that like Israel's children gathering manna day by day,
You look with consternation to see it melt away.

Labor may be just as plenty but hard times has got the reins,
Who wants to think of getting just his labor for his pains?
O wife! we may get bread to eat, but how to dress you all,
Is a question I can't answer—I'm afraid you'll have to fall.

O never mind, we'll go to work, we never have had wealth,
And if God will only give us what is better,— strength and health, We'll keep hard times outside the door, or dodge him here and there,
You shall never hear us sing the song of "Nothing fit to wear."

There's another class still lower looking round in sore dismay,
They've been used to poverty before—to little,
or no pay,
Yet they are better off than many, they have nothing now to lose,
And they'll take what fate will give, since buggare must not choose.

It may be very wicked but I cannot help the feeling,
Hard times will be a test I hope, to one and all appealing:
They who on stilts have travell'd at such a rapid pace,
Will be obliged to learn that "slow and steady wins the race";
And they who have struggled hardest to get and never give.

Ought surely learn the lesson, "to live, and to let live."
Harrison Square, Nov. 16 1857.

Anecdotes.

Two Irishmen were in jail—one for stealing a watch and the other for stealing a cow.
Mike, said the cow stealer, what o'clock is it?

Upon me sowl, said Mike, with a leer, I haven't the watch with me, but I think it's about milkin' time.

You are from the country, are you not, sir?
asked a dandy bookseller of a homely dressed Quaker, who had given him some trouble.
Yea.

Well, here's an essay on the rearing of calves.
That, replied the Quaker, as he turned to leave the shop, these had better present to thy mother.

Many Jane, said a girl to her companion, which railroad train do you like the best?
That one, replied Mary Jane, which furnishes a spark catcher!

Sheridan having threatened his son Tom to cut him off with a shilling, received this retort:
Where will you get the shilling?

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington street, N. Y.,
And 38 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having
some reliable standard for the strength of POT-ASH. The adulteration has become so general,
that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be as shown, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated
with salt, which is destructive in making soap;
it makes the Ladies say they did not have good lard, &c. One other reason, that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden cases, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailer.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes,

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
I prepared entirely different from other Saleratuses.
All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle
of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
directly producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes
through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt Water, and Flour. You will readily perceive the great value of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratuses. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like
the first, (come and picture, twisted, Lead-bred,
with a glass effecting water on the top, as you see in the bill.)

For making Bread with Sour
Milk and Cream Tartar and all kinds of Pastry;
also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Seltzer Powders, will accompany each package. B. T. BABBITT.

Scrofular Remedy.
This Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant and agreeable to the taste, and simple in its action, causing neither vomiting or purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease, removing the morbid matter from the Liver and giving a healthy action to the Liver and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that feeling of languor which is often experienced in regulating the Bowels, and restores and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.

In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofu-
lous Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Pimples, Ulcers, Bores, Carbuncles, Sore Throat, Gout, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Barber's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eruptions or Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most profuse success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.

It is also an effectual cure for Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Constipation and Derange-
ment of the Urinary Organs.
It is an infallible remedy for irregularity and other diseases peculiar to FEMALES, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, AG-

Miscellaneous.

A Thorn in the Memory

Hartley Bancroft was in the general ac-ception of the term, a kind-hearted man—his feelings were easily reached, and these gave him a ready impulse to his actions.
But quick feeling has, in no case, a twofold range, warning now into kindly emotion and now burning with sudden anger. Your so-called kind-hearted men are often betrayed into cruel words, and even cruel actions.
But there is this merit about them; when the heat of passion subdues their reason, and sometimes seek to heal where they have wounded.

Such a man was Hartley Bancroft. While the current of events ran smoothly along, the surface of his life reflected the unvarying sunshine, but a very little obstruction sufficed to ripple the waters, and then their aspect darkened.

One day Mr. Bancroft was sitting at his desk, with a pile of checks and bills before him, the sum of which he was taking preparatory to a deposit in the bank. It was late in the day for him to be figuring up his account; but he had unusually heavy payments to make, and the amount necessary to lift his notes had been obtained with difficulty. Mr.
Bancroft felt both hurried and worried, as his quick nervous movement showed.

Just at this inauspicious moment a man entered the store, and walked quickly back to where Mr. Bancroft was sitting.

Good-day, Mr. Bancroft!
There was not a very cordial tone in the voice of Mr. Bancroft, although the other was a customer who had bought of his goods freely.

Good-day. There was an embarrassed air about Mr. Cartwright.

What can I do for you? It was only a form of speech on the part of Mr. Bancroft, or rather a new form of saying, "Don't ask me for anything."

Now it happened that Mr. Cartwright was on that day, in a very "tight place," as it is called. It was two o'clock, and all of his efforts to get the full amount of money he needed had failed. Several notes had matured, and among them one of seven hundred dollars given to Mr. Bancroft. All but this he had succeeded in lifting; and now, frightened at the aspect of things, he had come very reluctantly to his creditor, whom he only knew to be a kind-hearted man, to state the extremity of his case, and ask a check for the amount of his note, as a temporary loan.

I am short seven hundred dollars. Can you help me?

No! was the answer, made in an emphatic tone, and with a knitting of his brows.

Mr. Bancroft noticed that his words seemed to stagger the applicant for money; he also noticed that he grew pale, and had a look of singular distress. But Mr. Bancroft was too much excited and annoyed for these things to have upon him at the time any right influence.

Then, said Mr. Cartwright, you will have to withdraw any note from the bank I cannot lift it.

I shall do no such thing, angrily replied
Mr. Bancroft. Take up your note as I long to mine.

I have failed in all my efforts to get money; and if you do not withdraw this note, it will be protested. Mr. Cartwright said this very deliberately, and in a firm tone of voice, yet with a face like ashes.

Very well, was the unyielding answer, let it be protested, then. If you can bear the operation, I think I can.

Coldly, almost sneeringly, were these cruel words said. Mr. Cartwright urged his case no further, but turned away and went from the store of his unyielding creditor—Scarcely had he passed into the street, before the better nature of Mr. Bancroft rose into ascendancy, and he repented of his unkindness.

William! he called to a clerk.

The young man came instantly.

Make this deposit, William; and at same time withdraw Mr. Cartwright's note, due today. Money's hard to get just now, and he is burdened with heavy payments. We must give him a helping hand. The merchant spoke kindly, not fretfully. The clerk departed with the hand-book and a check of sufficient amount to life the notes that were due.

Bancroft remained sitting at his desk, and from his attitude and the aspect of his countenance, it was plain that self-approval was not the pleasant state of mind in which he was indulging. The veil of a momentary angry excitement was removed, and now, plainly before the eyes of his mind, stood his humble and distressed debtor, toward whom not a single impulse of kind feeling had stirred.
He tried to find a refuge from selfbranding in the fact that he had done all his debtor asked—the note was withdrawn.

Yes, said a voice within him; you have cast a bone, with curses, into the face of a beggar!

Mr. Bancroft started up hurriedly from his desk, and walked the length of the store, returned, and sat down again. A long, deep sigh parted his lips.

What could have possessed me that I so far forgot both duty and kindness? I would give twice seven hundred dollars to recall this act, were it possible to do so.

Drawing a sheet of paper before him, Mr.
Bancroft took up a pen and wrote—

Mr. Edward Cartwright—My Dear Sir:— I have withdrawn your note. Forgive my rough unkindness. I was worried about money matters, and had but just made up my own Bank account. We are not always proof against petty annoyances. They sometimes disturb more than larger things. Come in to-morrow, and we will arrange for a renewal of the note, if you desire it, making the time to suit yourself.

Mr. Bancroft signed this apologetic letter and despatched it forthwith. He felt more comfortable after that. Still, he suffered some pain, and no little humiliation for the unmanly weakness he had manifested.

Did you see Mr. Cartwright at? he inquired of the lad who had taken the note.

No, sir; he wasn't there, he answered.

You left my note?

Yes, sir. The boy looked agitated. He stood a moment, as if waiting for further question, and then said—

They were just driving him away in a cariage.

What! Mr. Bancroft turned pale.

They said he had broken a blood-vessel.

Mr. Bancroft started to his feet with an exclamation of mingled surprise and pain.

There was blood on the floor.

Mr. Bancroft groaned aloud. After reflecting for a moment, he took his hat and went out hurriedly. A walk of five minutes brought him to the store of Mr. Cartwright.

What was the cause of this? he asked of one of the clerks. Did he fall? or was he lifting anything?

No. He was sitting at this desk, resting his head upon his hands, when I heard him call in a quick voice, and turning round I saw the blood flowing from his mouth.

Had anything disturbed him? asked Mr.
Bancroft.

Money has been hard to get during the week, the clerk answered, and Mr. Cartwright's payments were unusually large.—
There is one note not lifted yet, and it is a few minutes of 2 o'clock. The clerk pointed to a bank notice lying on Mr. Cartwright's desk.

Mr. Bancroft leaned over, and saw that it was a notice of the note due to him!

That is withdrawn from the Bank, said he.

I am glad to hear it, replied the clerk; I think it was your note that did the harm.

He had taken up the others, and went out two hours ago, after having been all the morning on the street, to try and get the sum required to lift this one; but he failed; and the consequences were more than he had strength to look at calmly. He is a just man, and a kind-hearted man, Mr. Bancroft.

We who live with him can bear that testimony.

Mr. Bancroft stood nearly motionless for a long time.

Where does Mr. Cartwright live? he inquired, at length.

At number—Fifteenth street.

To the dwelling of Mr. Cartwright he went in all haste. He found everything there to confirm his worst apprehensions. The hemorrhage had been very profuse. Already so large a quantity of blood had been lost that the sick man was reduced to a state of insensibility, and still the bleeding continued. The family were, of course, in the deepest distress. He saw Mrs. Cartwright for a moment, and in that moment the impression of her white, grief-stricken face was transferred to a page in memory's book that no after event could dim or obliterate. A beautiful daughter, just on the verge of womanhood, glided past him once, and her face of terror remained to haunt him for life. He saw the physician, and to his inquiries received no hopeful answers.

When Mr. Bancroft left the house of sorrow he went forth almost stealthily, and with a feeling of guilt in his heart.

My work! my work! a voice within him kept repeating, and do what he would, he found it impossible to silence the accusing spirit.

I can never forgive myself if he should die! said Mr. Bancroft to himself. Oh! what evil is sometime wrought by passion in an unguarded moment! Why did I not think before speaking?

Alas! the dreaded evil came. Mr. Bancroft was at his store an hour earlier than usual on the next morning.

Have you heard from Mr. Cartwright? he inquired, anxiously, of a clerk.

Yes, sir.

How is he?

Dead!

Dead! Mr. Bancroft stepped back a pace or two, as if strong hands were bearing against him.

Yes, sir. He died at seven o'clock last evening; so the paper says.

Mr. Bancroft sighed heavily; and then walking to his desk, sat down, and remained in troubled thought for a long time. There was only a single aspect of the case that gave him any relief, and this was the probable ignorance of every one but himself of the immediate cause of Mr. Cartwright's death.

He had not, it was presumed, mentioned the unfeeling repulse which he had received, when at the eleventh hour, and as a last result, he had gone to one from whom he had confidently expected not only kind consideration, but prompt relief; and so the secret had died with him.

Mr. Bancroft did not visit the house of mourning. He could not look upon the distress which his own conscience charged him with originating; and his heart was veiled in gloomy shadows.

There was no one to represent Mr. Bancroft in his business, which had to be closed.
An active, hard-working merchant, he had succeeded, through many disadvantages, in establishing a trade that, prosecuted with industry for a few years, would have given his family a moderate fortune. But he was stricken down in an inauspicious moment.
Serious losses occurred in the settlement of his affairs, and when all his debts were finally paid, there was nothing over for his family.

Poor Mary Cartwright! said Mrs. Bancroft to her husband, one day, about six months after the death of Mr. Cartwright; I saw her at Mrs. Marvin's to-day. She gives music lessons to her daughter Helen. How changed she was!

Mr. Bancroft made no reply and his wife was in some doubt as to whether he had really heard her remark.

She says that her mother has never been out of the house since her father's death.

Still Mr. Bancroft made no response. But how the words smote him! Ah! there was a thorn in his memory that he could never extract.

There was not a dollar left for the family from poor Cartwright's estate! said a fellow-merchant.

So I have heard.

Mr. Bancroft answered with seeming indifference, but his heart quivered as if a blow had been given.

It is said that the failure to raise money to lift one of his notes killed him, said another.

People will say almost anything, replied
Mr. Bancroft, with assumed coldness.

Time went steadily onward. The seething spot on the surface of trade, where Mr. Car-wright went down, was obliterated by the onward moving currents; and he was scarcely remembered in the business circles where once his busy face was a familiar object.

But there was one who could never thrust aside his image; one in whose memory his presence was a rankling thorn. Many times had he tried to pluck out this thorn by secret acts of kindness to the family of Mr. Car-wright. But the effort only seemed to make the anguish more intense; for the little he offered by a selfish contrasted so poorly with the all-sustaining life-deeds of a husband and father, that he was shamed back into imputy.

The case was hopeless. That single act of unkindness, so fatal in its consequences, was done forever. It had gone beyond its utmost reach, and there was no surgeon skilled enough to extract the thorn it had left to rankle in his memory.

Facts About the Human Body.

There are 200 bones in the human body, exclusive of the teeth. These bones are composed of animal and earthly materials, the former predominating in youth, and the latter in old age, rendering the bones brittle.
The most important of these bones is the spine, which is composed of 24 small bones, called the vertebrae, one on top of the other,

Save Your Hair.
REMEMBER
PACKARD'S REGENERATOR
WILL not only restore gray hair to its original color, but will make the hair grow on bald heads. Read the following letter from one of the oldest and best hair dressers in Plymouth County.
North Bridgewater, Nov. 5th, 1857.
Mr. Packard—Sir—Your Regenerator for the hair is truly a wonderful preparation for the hair, and I have used it for the past few months on my head.
It has caused a HEALTHY GROWTH of Hair where it was quite bald; and it has restored the color from GRAY to BLACK, its natural color. I have been a barber for twenty-five years, and I freely say that your Regenerator is much the best restorative for the hair I have seen.
Yours, C. TAYLOR.
Another letter from a well known man in Dorchester.
Upham's Corner, Dorchester, Nov. 9, 1857.
Mr. Packard—Sir—My Hair having turned very gray, I was induced to try your Regenerator for the hair, and am happy to inform you that it has accomplished for me all that you recommend it to. My Hair is now a good color.
Yours, THEODORE HERSEY.

AND MEDICINES!
C. C. JOHNSON,
WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants of Quincy and vicinity, that he has opened A NEW DRUG STORE,
---IN---
GOODNOW'S BUILDING,
(Formerly occupied by Dr. J. Marden,) where he will be happy to wait upon all who may favor
him with their patronage, day or night.
His Stock and Fixtures are entirely new, and his Medicines, having been selected with great care,
and are warranted pure and genuine.
Mr. J.'s Powdered Articles are all fresh, as are his Herbs, and his Tinctures and Syrups have all been manufactured since his arrival here,
and can be depended upon by physicians and others
for the cure of the most delicate and difficult cases. His Stock of Chemicals is large, and comprises all the varieties usually found in a well-conducted Apothecary Store. Of Patent Medicines, his Stock is large and varied, and will be enlarged from time to time, as new articles appear.
Of Perfumery, Fancy Articles, Cigars, &c., a large variety of which he can sell as cheap as a retail article can be purchased elsewhere.
With his large assortment of Drugs and Chemicals, Mr. Johnson is prepared to compound
Physicians' Prescriptions,
as well and accurately as they can be prepared in any city in the United States.
He has secured the services of Mr. G. W. Gack, formerly with Mr. Spalding, Tremont street, Boston, who will act in the absence of Mr. Johnson from the Store with equal accuracy and care.
Mr. J. transacts a strict attention to business, and with a share of public patronage.

sent us in the Senate, I am unable to say. Messrs. Gosman and Rice have been prominent in the canvass, and for years past have been aspirants for the office. Their strong prejudices in favor of the northern part of the Territory, shown in many of their public acts, (from pecuniary motives, it is said,) will probably raise a formidable opposition adverse to their interests, in the most prosperous and least cared for—southern Minnesota.

As this, from all appearances, will be the ablest legislative body ever convened in the Territory, we expect good men, whether they be from Grasshopperdom or the Paradise of Minnesota.

Yours very respectfully,
JOSEPH.
THE QUINCY PATRIOT.
Saturday, Dec. 12th, 1857.

"BORN TO NO MASTER, OF NO SECT ARE WE."

FURTHER PARTICULARS IN RELATION TO THE LATE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—In connection with what we have already published in relation to this unfortunate affair—we gather the following from one who received it from the dying man's lips:

"That Mr. Nightingale took the 6:12 o'clock train on that morning, with the understanding that they were to stop at the usual custom, at the Wollaston Depot, and as they were advertised to do. That their speed was in a measure checked as they approached the Station, but the Conductor seeing no one who signified a wish to get out, ordered the breaks up and the steam on, just as Mr. N. was stepping upon the platform. The sudden start threw him from his balance and under the wheels of a baggage car, in immediate connection with the one he had left."

Mr. Nightingale was in the employ of the Corporation, painting their new house at that place, and well known to the Company, as he was in the habit of passing and re-passing upon the road almost daily.

When taken up, he was conscious of his situation, and beseeched in the most urgent manner to be carried immediately to his home. Amidst all his sufferings his reason never forsook him; thinking those who performed the sad duty, of conveying him to his afflicted friends, in the kindest manner, for the attention shown him—expressing the fear that he should never be able to repay them.

Sudden and melancholy a bereavement cast a gloom over the community. And when the funeral bell, told in solemn accents the decease of our brother—few could realize that the morning of his usefulness had closed forever—that he had passed from among us—from his sorrows and trials—to a brighter and happier world.

FUNERAL OBSEQUES OF THE DECEASED.
On Sunday last the mortal remains were conveyed to the tomb. The funeral services were held in the Unitarian Church, and conducted by the Rev. Charles Brooks, in a most solemn and impressive manner. The preacher somewhat prepared his audience for the occasion by a very appropriate service in the usual course of the afternoon devotion; alluding to the character and usefulness of the deceased, and sought to impress upon the minds of his hearers the truth of the words so oft repeated, as almost to have lost the force of their meaning:

"The uncertainty of human life,"
After the close of the usual service, the funeral train, preceded by a company of fellow workmen from Boston, with the body of the deceased, entered the church, and after the coffin had been deposited in front of the altar, the choir sang the familiar hymn:

"Unveil thy bosom faithful tomb," Followed by the reading of selections of Scripture, and the performance of those pathetic lines:

"Vain spark of heavenly flame," which was done in an effective manner. Prayer, suited to the occasion, closed the ceremonies. After which an opportunity was presented to friends and acquaintances to look for the last time upon the face of him, whom they knew to be faithful in all life's relations; who had suffered much, and who had thus mercifully been removed from his afflictions—to his home and to his rest.

This sad event, with all its attending circumstances, has made an impression upon the sympathies of the community, that will not soon be forgotten.

VALUE OF A LADY'S HOOR. In 1745 hoops were worn as large as now. Sir Robert Strange, fleeing from pursuit after the battle of Culloden, was concealed in the crisis of his trouble by a young lady, who offered to shelter him under the ample folds of her petticoat. To this strange proposal, considering all circumstances, it is not strange that he assented, and here he remained undiscovered. Either love or gratitude suggested the sequel, and they were subsequently married.

RAILROAD CHANGE. An alteration has been made in the time of running the cars on the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad. See advertisement.

CONGRESS. The First Session of the Thirty Fifth Congress was commenced at Washington Monday. The Senate—fifty members present—was called to order by the Secretary, who read a letter from Vice President Breckenridge, stating his inability to reach Washington at the commencement of the Session. Mr. Bright of Indiana, the oldest senator present, administered the oath to the members, when Mr. Fitzpatrick of Alabama, was chosen President pro tem.

There were two hundred and twenty members of the House in attendance at the opening, and these immediately proceeded to the choice of a Speaker, with the following result: James L. Orr of South Carolina, Democrat, 128; Galusha A. Grow of Pennsylvania, Republican, 84; scattering 13. Messrs. Giddings and Banks conducted the speaker elect to his seat. The dominant party then completed its programme in the election of James C. Allen of Illinois Clerk; Mr. Gloss-brenner, Sergeant-at-Arms, and Mr. Hackney door-keeper. Mr. Closkey was declared postmaster by resolution. On Tuesday the President's Message was transmitted to Congress.

AMERICAN SALOON. Mr. Chapman, a distinguished artist in this line, has located himself at the north of the Stone Temple, and opposite the Hancock House, where he will be happy to receive the visits of our citizens, and to favor all who may desire a good likeness of themselves or friends. We have seen specimens of his work, and think them excellent better than the usual run. His prices are moderate—his stay short—take the earliest opportunity therefore to make him a call.

VOTE FOR SENATOR. The following table gives the vote for State Senator, at the late election, in the East Norfolk District:

	French	Holbrook	Wood
Branthree,	201	161	88
Milton,	97	81	62
Quincy,	172	287	177
Randolph,	199	260	237
Stoughton,	261	497	167
Weymouth,	361	414	153

1201 1300 883

Almer Holbrook, of Weymouth, the Gardiner candidate, is thus elected by a plurality of nine votes.

ACCIDENT. A small child of J. A. Fawcett of this town, on Saturday afternoon last, fell into a pond of water near Greenleaf street, and was rescued from his almost inevitable fate by Capt. Noah Hersey and the Messrs. Blanchard, who were at a new building, now being erected near by: when taken from the water life was almost extinct, but by the exertions of Mr. Hersey, and those with him, he was resuscitated and restored again to his anxious parents. Such acts of beneficence ought not to pass unnoticed.

EFFECT OF HARD TIMES. The amount of fire received by Henry A. Gay, the worthy Depot Master at the station of the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad in this town, during the month of November of the present year was $781 to $1120 for the same month of the previous year.

WHAT IS LEGAL TENDER? American gold coin in any amount—American silver in five dollars—three cents pieces to the amount of thirty cents, and one cent pieces to the amount of ten cents are legal tender.

DRAMATIC REPRESENTATIONS. The Amateur Dramatic representations, in Johnson's Hall on Wednesday evening, were pleasing performances and elicited much applause from a numerous audience. The different characters were well sustained, and we hope, as a source of amusement for the public, and of elementary improvement to those engaged in them, these representations will be continued during the winter seasons. Cheerfulness is the sunshine of the soul, and harmless mirth like the lightning's flash lights up the dark hours of our sublimity existence.

CORONER'S INQUEST. An inquest was held at the Lyceum Room on Thursday Dec. 10, at 1 o'clock, P. M., to investigate the circumstances connected with the death of Mr. Nightingale, and adjourned to Friday evening, Dec. 11, when the following verdict was agreed upon:

"That George B. Nightingale came to his death on the 4th inst., at 10 o'clock, P. M., from injuries received on the morning of the 21 inst. in consequence of leaving the cars while in motion, at the Wollaston Station, in Quincy, on the Old Colony and Fall River Railroad. From the evidence adduced, the jury are satisfied, that had the train stopped at that station as advertised, the accident would not have occurred; and are also of the opinion, that the public safety demands that trains should stop at all stations, at such times as they are advertised." Lewis Bass, Coroner.

FRANCIS M. JOHNSON, Foreman.
Elbridge Clapp, Elisha Turner, Wyman Abercrombie, George L. Gill, Jacob Flint, Jury.

SPIRITUALISM. We understand Mrs. H. F. Kimbly, of New Hampshire, will speak at Johnson's Hall, to-morrow morning at 14:11 and in the afternoon at 14:2 o'clock. As Mrs. H. will be here during the week, she will speak to the friends on the subject of Spiritualism any evening, either in this or the neighboring towns.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE. The President says that owing to the monetary derangement of the country, a government loan may be required before the close of the present year. That the Federal Government cannot do much to relieve the embarrassments arising from the insolvency of the banks—that it lays with the patriotism and wisdom of the States to correct the evil by introducing a specie currency. He recommends however, the passage of a general bankrupt law applicable to all parts of the country.

With the exception of Spain he represents our foreign relations on an amicable understanding as could be desired. Our difficulties with New Grenada are in a fair train for settlement. Our right to a passage across the Isthmus and other points of South America acquired by treaty he recommends should be protected at all hazards. On Kansas affairs he is equally explicit; although in favor of obtaining a full expression of the will of the people in regard to the Constitution submitted by the Constitutional Convention, still, under present circumstances, when the subject is being used for treasonable purposes, he urges upon Congress the necessity of settling the question at once, in order to restore peace and safety to the Union. A fair opportunity, he says, will be given all to vote, and if they refuse to act, they alone will be responsible for the consequences. The rebellion in Utah the President says is the first which has existed in our Territories, and humanity requires that it should be put down in such a manner that it will be the last.

For the Patriot.
On the Death of G. B. N.

There are scenes in life so sad that even the heart of the stranger beats in sympathy to gaze upon them. But doubly grieving is the portion of those who are the sharers and sufferers; their hearts must indeed bleed, and all the christian fortitude they possess be called into action to sustain them in their affliction.

The sympathy of the whole community is with those stricken ones, who so lately listened to the dying moan of him who bore the endearing relation of husband, father, son and brother. The stroke that called him home to God was sudden and terrible, and shows but too plainly the truth of those words—"That in the midst of life we are in death." Yet there is consolation in store for us even in the midst of these seeming cruelties. To the wife of him who has passed on—to whom she has been wont to look for protection and support—the anguish of the parting is severe, so suddenly has it overtaken her. The bitter tears must unbidden flow. But Jesus wept and we would not bid these dry tears at this sad separation from a loved companion. But through this bleeding tears mayst thou be permitted to discern a father's love—and in time learn to bow and kiss the rod. If this world were thine only abiding place, then indeed might thy tears flow unassuaged. But a few sorrow and fewer joys, make up the sum of earthly existence, and we hasten on to a more glorious immortality. This lesson it must teach thee the uncertainty of life, and the importance of a preparation for a reunion in the skies with him who has gone before, and with the poet mayst thou feel

It is a beautiful belief,
That ever round our head
Are hovering, on noiseless wing,
The spirit of the dead.

Those to whom in infancy he had caressed, and first taught to lip the name of father have lost an earthly protector and friend, may they lean confidently on the all supporting arm of Him who has promised to be a Father to the fatherless.

'Tis not the first time those parents now in the decline of life, have had the links that formed the family circle severed, and now from the chain has gone another, drawing still closer together those that are left. But thy feet are fast hastening towards the portal of that life, where there is no more suffering trials. Ere long in a brighter world than this the family circle shall be again complete. There weeping ones shall thy tears be dried, no more shall thy hearts be torn with anguish. Accident and death cannot enter there.

There is a world where every lowliest thing lasts longest; where death's life never its head Above the grossest form, and matter there Is all transparent substance;

The beautiful life never there; Death lies A dreaming; he has naught to do; the babe Plays with his darts.

THE SECRET INFIRMITIES OF YOUTH AND MATURITY.
Just Published, Gratis, the 5th Thousand.

A FEW words on the rational treatment with-out Medicine, of Seminal-erecton or Local Weakness, Nocturnal Emission, Genital and Nervous Debility, Premature Decay of the System, Impotency, and Impediments to Marriages generally, by Dr. DE LANEY, M. D.

The important fact that many alarming complaints, originating in the impudence and violence of youth, may be easily removed without Medicine, is in the small tract, clearly demonstrated; and the entirely new and highly successful treatment, as adopted by the Author, fully explained, by means of which every one is enabled to cure himself perfectly at the least possible cost, thereby avoiding all the advertised nostrums of the day.

Sent free on address, gratis and post free, in a sealed envelope, by returning two postage stamps to Dr. DE LANEY, 47 Lispenard Street.

Poetry.

Next Door.

Let other people brag about
The pleasant folk they meet;
I only wish they'd come and live
A week in my street.
They never should have caught me there,
Had I but known before,
That neighbors could have proved so bad,
As our "next door."

They've seven children—ugly brats
As ever saw the light—
Who shout and howl and shriek and squall
From morning until night.
'Tis true their parents flag them well,
'Tis true their mother's hand is true,
I wish old maids, or bachelors,
Were our "next door."

Then so familiar, too, they've grown;
It is extremely hard to see
To see nine people on the watch
To courtesy, how and nod!
Now, eighteen eyes, become, in time,
A sort of stare-cure bore;
I really wish they'd look at home,
At our "next door."

My greenhouse seems a favor'd mark,
For brick-bats to be thrown;
My fruit and flowers within their reach
They gather as their own.
My peaches, grapes and nectarines,
On which I set much store,
Have all been eaten by the grubs
At our "next door."

They keep a cockatoo that screams,
A horrid dog that howls,
Three cats that claw my flowers up,
Besides some nasty fowls.
That "flying visit" often pays,
And peck my garden o'er;
I keep the hens, they keep the eggs,
At our "next door."

My neighbors pay no tradesman's bills,
For taxes have no care;
Last week I had the water stopp'd
By some mistake of theirs.
Each going on and going on,
I'll not submit to more.
Another house I'll seek, detached,
With no "next door."

Three Weeks after Marriage.
My dearest, you are going out?
Indeed, it is very cold.
Let me, sweet, have your neck
This handkerchief entold.

You know how anxious for your health,
My own dear George, am I,
One loving kiss before we part—
Good bye, sweet cheek, good bye!

Three Years after Marriage.
You're going out?—why don't you go?
I cannot help the rain;
You wouldn't grudge me mightily,
To see me come back again?

Money—or None.
The subject here is from the German,
and rightly understood, there is a world of meaning in them—

Oh! 'tis all one to me, all one,
Whether I've money, or whether I've none!
He who has money can buy me a wife,
And he who has none can be free for life.
He who has money can trade if he chooses,
And he who has none has nothing to lose.
He who has money can quit at the fair,
And he who has none escapes from much care.
He who has money has care not a few,
And he who has none can sleep the night through.
He who has money can go to the play,
And he who has none at home can stay.
He who has money can travel about,
And he who has none can go without.
He who has money can be as free as will,
And he who has none can be as poor as a mill.
He who has money can eat oyster meat,
And he who has none the shell can eat.
He who has money can drink foreign wine,
And he who has none with the goat will not pine.
He who has money the cash must pay,
And he who has none, says—'Charge it, pray!
He who has money keeps a dog if he please,
And he who has none is not troubled with fleas.
He who has money must die one day,
And he who has none but go the same way.
Ah! 'tis all one to me, all one,
Whether I've money, or whether I've none!

Anecdotes.

A farmer was once asked what inference he could draw from the text in Job—"And the wild ass enuiled up the wind." Well, he replied, the only inference that I can draw, is that it would be a long time before they would grow fat upon it.

A fellow walking through a church yard, stumbled upon the inscription,—I am not dead, but asleep.
Accepting this in its literal significance, and greatly disgusted at what he deemed a manifest attempt to impose upon travellers, he exclaimed—
Well, if I was dead, by thunder I'd own it.

A good old Quaker lady, after listening to the extravagant yarns of a storekeeper, as long as her patience would allow, said to him,
Friend, what a pity it is a sin to lie, when it seems so necessary to thy business.

Jack! said a man to a lad just entering his teens, your father's drowned.
Darn it, replied the young hopeful, and he has got my knife in his pocket.

A buffoon, at the court of Francis I., complained to the king that a great lord threatened to murder him for uttering some jokes about him.
If he does, said Francis, he shall be hanged in five minutes after.
I wish your majesty would hang him five minutes before.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington Street, N. Y.,
And 38 India Street, Boston.

THE PROPRIETOR of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having some reliable standard for the strength of POTASH. The adulteration has become so general, that he, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gave nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of ascertaining his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be uniform, and cleaning out of every impurity. Potash many times is adulterated with salt, which is destructive in making soap; it makes the Ladies say they did not have good soap, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailer.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes, always being the same strength, and producing the same results; and will warrant it in all cases, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Fancy Soap. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.
Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Laundering and Hotels.
Directions for cleaning out of every impurity.
Directions for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sal Soda.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.

BEST SALT ERATUS.
IS prepared entirely different from other salt eratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bland, Pleasant, and all kinds of Cakes, without containing a particle of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked; thereby producing wholesome results. Every package of Salt eratus is warranted to give and passes through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of the Salt eratus that it is entirely different from other Salt eratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first, (name and picture, twisted). Bland bread, with a little salt eratus, will keep on the top, as you see in the box.

Full directions for making Bread with Sour Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry; for making Cream Soda Water; also, directions for making Soda Powders, will accompany each package.

COMPLETE Dental Establishment.

DRS. CUMMINGS & FLAGG,
SURGEON DENTISTS.
25 Tremont Street, (op stairs.) Boston.

DRS. C. & F., having had extensive experience in every branch of practical and scientific Dentistry, and being conversant with the best known methods and latest improvements in the profession, feel qualified to perform all operations in a manner highly satisfactory to patients, and reflecting credit upon themselves.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH. By the improved principle of Atmospheric Pressure, teeth, from one to an entire set, are inserted firmly and beautifully, without the use of springs or clasps. Many beautiful specimens of Plate work, on gold, silver and platinum, are on exhibition at our Rooms, which, for taste, style and durability, we believe cannot be surpassed.

EXTRACTING TEETH. In this important and difficult branch of the profession, great care is taken to render the operation the least painful. By the application of a numbing agent to the gum, the operation is performed with comparatively little pain. This new process of extracting teeth has been in use nearly two years, and we feel confident in recommending it to our patrons and the public, as lessening in a great measure the pain and suffering attendant upon dental operations. In some cases entirely removes pain, while, in almost all instances, it does much to contribute to the comfort of patients. The application of ether, which is entirely painless, is administered to those who desire it.

FILLING TEETH. This is the most difficult operation the dental practitioner ever called upon to perform. It often times calls for the skill of operators who have been in practice many years. It is also, when well performed, the most certain and only remedy that can be applied for the cure of decayed teeth. But, to be effective, it must be executed in the most thorough and perfect manner. The preservation of a tooth, when well filled, and with suitable material, if it be afterwards kept constantly clean, may be regarded as certain. At any rate, it will never again be attacked in the same place by disease.

By the use of the new preparation of Crya Gold, teeth do not only escape from decay and partially saved, but, veritably restored to the form, comfort and utility of the original structure. By a wonderful property of gold, the metal, in its crystalline or precipitated state, by peculiar manipulation, passes from a pulverulent to a cohesive and solid mass, the same as gold. By virtue of this remarkable property, it is made to fit the cavity of a tooth, and even to restore its shape, as substantially as if it were cast.

The proprietors of this complete dental establishment will always be pleased to give their advice on the care and preservation of the teeth of children and adults, and the result of their long experience in cases requiring the opinion of practical scientific dentists.

Miscellaneous.
The Thoughtless Refusal.

I am sorry to say that his name was Smith. Not John, to be sure; but what was almost as bad, Ephraim, or Eph, as the people called him when they felt familiar—named so in commemoration of his father and grandfather before him, after an excellent old-fashioned custom that has been the ruin of many an innocent child. Now if it had been Brown, or White, or even Jones, it might have been overlooked, but to be Eph Smith, and rather young and unsophisticated at that, was more than a sensitive young fellow in love could bear. For Ephraim had committed the indiscretion of falling desperately in love with a bright particular star, and seeking to wed it.

Poor Eph! The money he spent on hair-oil and otto-of-rose, the wonderful cravats he sported, the tight boots he wore, and made believe they didn't hurt him, the airs and attitudes he practiced before his glass, the flutterings of hope and despair he endured, are they not within the experience of every young swain in love? What need to register them here?

Miss Fanny Cutter had run through a winter in town, and bethought herself of her uncle's family, whom she had not visited since childhood, just as people were leaving for Niagara and the springs. In consequence, a letter flavored with jockey club, and laden with some words, arrived at E—, announced her intention of visiting Dear Aunt Mary, and was followed the next Saturday night by the young lady herself.

All E— looked at Dr. Cutter's pew, next day, and some eyes stared in that direction all through the service, quite astonished at the display of fashion. The bonnet was a cloud of lace, and flowers and ribbons; the silk dress richer than anything in town, except Mrs. Willard's satin; the white kid gloves the smallest; the handkerchief nearly all lace; the gold chain and bracelets a wonder, and the bustle (it was in those days) beyond

AND

MEDICINES!

C. C. JOHNSON,

WOULD respectfully inform the inhabitants

of Quincy and vicinity, that he has opened

A NEW DRUG STORE,

IN

GOODNOW'S BUILDING,

(Formerly occupied by Dr. J. Marden,) where

he will be happy to wait upon all who may favor

him with their patronage, day or night.

His Stock and Fixtures are entirely new, and his Medicines have been selected with great care,

and are warranted pure and genuine.

Mr. J. J. Powdered Articles are all fresh, as are his Herbs, and his Tinctures and Symp-has all been manufactured since his arrival here,

and can be depended upon by physicians and others

as being of the proper strength and purity.

His Stock of Chemicals is large, and comprises all the varieties usually found in a well-conducted Apothecary Store. Of Patent Medicines,

his Stock is large and varied, and will be en-

His Stock of Fancy Articles, Cigars, &c., is a large variety of which he can sell as cheap as a Genuine article can be purchased elsewhere.

With his large assortment of Drugs and Chemicals, Mr. Johnson is prepared to compound

Physicians' Prescriptions,

as well and accurately as they can be prepared in any city in the United States.

He has secured the services of Mr. G. W. Gook-

in, formerly with Mr. Spalding, Tremont street,

Boston, who will act in the absence of Mr. Johnson from the Store with equal accuracy and correctness.

Mr. J. trusts by a strict attention to business, to merit a share of public patronage.

Poetry.

Who Liveth?

It is not he whose soul is Bound to mercenary shames,
Whose Gordan knot of worldly weal
His every nobler feeling binds—
Whose eyes are blind with golden dust,
And never gaze upon the day—
Whose limbs bear onward to the grave
A solid mass of fading clay:

'Tis not the herring from the field,
When music sounds and banners wave,
And heads are hot and hands are strong
To make for each a soldier's grave
Where conflict rages, till the weak
Are forced at last to yield or fly,
And heroes those that Fate reserved,
Of thousands who were paid to die:

'Tis not the parasite of Power—
The cynophant that loves to cling Around the idol of a day—
A serpent with a glittering wing—
Disimulation in his words,
Dishonor in his winning smile—
A kind of human misanthrope,
That saps the heart it doth beguile:

'Tis not the Sybarite, whose lust
Hath turned his harlot in the street,
Whose cup with roses ever crowned,
His gay companions love to greet,
Whose couch is filled with Eider down
Whose robe is from the Persian loom;
Life is not his, for Pleasure lives
For aye within a painted tomb.

'Tis he who heals the wounded breast,
And wipes away the mourner's tear,
Whose words of tenderness flow forth
As fountains in a desert drear—
Upon whose lip Eternal Truth
Sits and a world of sin and shame—
Presiding in perpetual youth,
She breathes a dying Saviour's name.

'Tis he who stamps upon his brain
The lore of glorious ages fled—
Holding high converse with the Past,
And dwelling with the twilight dead;
Stealing true inspiration's fire
From Sun and moon and stars;
Claimed to his task with holy zeal,
And wearing labor's thorny crown.

'Tis he who strikes Apollo's lyre,
Whose burning words can never die—
That echo through the vast of years,
As angel anthems through the sky,
Who gird by vow, and want, and pain,
In a dark wilderness of years—
Was an imperishable name—
A broken-hearted Man of Tears.

Sympathy.

There should be no despair for you
While night stars are burning;
While evening pours its silent dew,
And sunshine glows the morning.
There should be no despair—though tears
May flow down like a river;
Are not the best beloved of years
Around your heart forever?
They weep, you weep, it must be so;
Winds sigh as you are sighing;
And Winter should be glad in snow
Where Autumn's leaves are lying.
Yet these revive, and from their fate
Your fate cannot be parted;
Then journey on, if not elate,
Still, never broken hearted.

Influence.

Drop follow drop, and swells
With rain the sweeping river;
Word follows word, and tells
A truth that lives for ever.
Flake follows flake, like sprites Whose wings the winds discover;
Thought follows thought, and lights
The realm of mind forever.
Beam follows beam, to cheer
The clouds a bolt would shiver;
Throb follows throb, and far Gives place to joy for ever.
The drop, the flake, the beam;
Teach us a lesson ever:
The word, the thought, the dream,
Impress the soul forever.

Anecdotes.

A little boy had one day done wrong, and was, after parental correction, sent to ask in secret the forgiveness of his heavenly Father. His offence had been passion. Anxious to hear what he would say, his mother followed to the door of his room. In hissing accents he heard him ask to be made better, never to be angry again; and then, with childlike simplicity, he added—
"Lord, make my temper better too."

A lady, relating her matrimonial experience said:—
At first, on retiring of a cold night, my husband used to say to me—Put your dear little footies with mine; but soon it was—Keep your hoofs off of me.

The other day a fellow named Tom was lying upon the floor, when his mother observed him, asked if he was ill.
I am rather low, replied Tom.

A man came near dying in California, by putting on a pair of clean stockings and drinking a glass of cold water—an experiment he had not tried for many years before.

Did the defendant approach the plaintiff's residence? Inquired an attorney, in a case of assault and battery.
No, sir, was the reply, he went at him with a poker.

Snuggletit, will you have some of the butter?
Thank you, madam, I belong to Temperance Society, and can't take anything strong.

A certain cockney bluebeard, overcome by his sensibilities, fainted at the grave of his fourth spouse. What can we do with him? asked a perplexed friend of his.
Let him alone, said a waggish bystander, he'll soon re-wive.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BIBBITT,
68 & 70 Washington street, N. Y.,
And 38 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years seen the necessity of having
some reliable standard for the strength of POT-ASH. The adulteration has become so general,
that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subsiding his name to every package, and warrants the strength to be the same, and will warrant it to be so, if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soap, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, with full directions for its use. It is made with little trouble;
it is all prepared in five or ten minutes.
1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease
into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft
soap.
Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Lard and Candles.
Directions for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sulphur.
Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.

B. T. BIBBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuits, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle
of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes
through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like the first, (name and picture, to tested). Lead-bread with a glass effecting water on the top, as you
see in the bill.)
Full directions for making Bread with Sour
Milk and Cream Tartar, and all kinds of Pastry;
also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Soda-biscuits, will accompany each package.

Baile's Great
SCROFULAR REMEDY.

THIS Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant
and agreeable to the taste, and simple in its action, causing neither vomiting or purging. It directly upon the primary cause of disease, regulates the bowels, removes all vitiated secretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes that debility of Languor which is often experienced in the Spring and Summer, and removes, and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.
In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofulous
Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas,
Scald Head, Tumors, Ulcers, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Inflammatory Rheumatism, Fever,
Sore, Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Barber's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried, and failed to afford relief.
It is also an effectual cure for Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Costiveness and Derange-
ment of the Urinary Organs.
It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and other diseases peculiar to Females, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart,
Dizziness and Headache.

It can be given with perfect safety and most desirable results in all cases, to any person from infancy to old age.
Made and sold by WM. SMITH HALL, Sole
Proprietor, Quincy, Mass., to whom all orders
must be addressed. Sold also by Redding & Co.,
No. 8 State street; Geo. C. Goodwin, No. 99
Corbin street, Boston, and all Druggists and Medicine Dealers throughout the United States.

COMPLETE Dental Establishment.

DRS. CUMMINGS & FLAGG,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
25 Tremont Street, (up stairs,) Boston.

DRS. C. & F., having had extensive experience in every branch of practical and scientific Dentistry, and being conversant with the best known methods and latest improvements in the profession, feel qualified to perform all operations in a manner highly satisfactory to patients, and reflecting credit upon themselves.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH. By the improved principle of Atmospheric Pressure, teeth, from one to an entire set, are inserted firmly and beautifully, without the use of springs or clasps. Many beautiful specimens of Plate work, on gold, silver and platinum, are on exhibition at our Rooms, which, for taste, style and durability, we believe cannot be surpassed.

EXTRACTING TEETH. In this important
and difficult branch of the profession, great care
is taken to render the operation the least painful. By the application of a powerful agent to the gum, the operation is performed with comparatively little pain. This new process of extracting teeth has been in use nearly two years,
and we feel confident in recommending it to our patrons and the public, as lessening in a great measure the dread which has heretofore existed,
of dental operations. In some cases it entirely removes pain, while, in almost all instances, it does much to contribute to the comfort of patients. The application of ether, which is entirely painless, is administered to those who desire it.

FILLING TEETH. This is the most difficult operation the dental practitioner is ever called upon to perform. It often-times baffles the skill of operators who have been in practice
many years. It is also, when well performed,
the most certain and only remedy that can be applied for the cure of decayed teeth. But, to be effective, it must be executed in the most thorough and perfect manner. The preservation of a tooth, when well filled, and with suitable material, if it be afterwards kept constantly clean, may be regarded as certain. At any rate, it will never again be attacked in the same place by disease.

By the use of the new preparation of Crysta-line, teeth are not only arrested from decay, partially saved, but veritably restored to the form, comfort and utility of the original structure. By a wonderful property of gold, the metal, in its crystalline or precipitated state, by peculiar manipulations, passes from a pulverulent to a cohesive and solid mass, the same as combined by this remarkable property, it is made to fill the cavity of a tooth, and even to restore its shape, as substantially as if it were cast.

The proprietors of this complete dental establishment will always be pleased to give their advice on the care and preservation of the teeth of children and adults, and the result of their long experience in cases requiring the opinion of practical scientific dentists.

Miscellaneous.
The Newspaper.
The old farm-house wore a quiet, pleasant look, as the setting sun gilded its small windows over which the luxuriant grape vines were carefully trained. In the open door sat the farmer, with a little morocco-covered book in his hand, on which his attention had been fixed for the last hour. He was a man of method and order—old Richard Heath—and aside from his regular account books, which he always kept with scrupulous care, he always set down in this little book, in the simplest manner possible, all his expenses (no very complicated account by the way; and all he had received during the year, in the metal, as he said not by the way of trade.

The last account he had just reckoned up, and the result was highly satisfactory if one might judge from the pleasant expression of his face as he turned to his wife and addressed her by her pretty old-fashioned name.

Millicent, said he, this has been a lucky year. How little we thought when we moved to this place, twenty-five years ago, that we should ever get five hundred a year out of the rocky, barren farm.

It does pay for a good deal of hard work,<

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Thoughts on Slavery.

BY ELIZA.

O thou Omnipotent, Almighty One!
Hast Thou created man a slave to man,
When of one flesh and blood all were created?
Hast Thou decreed a part to wear the chain?
Most human flesh and blood, and inborn rights
By Nature given, and by Nature's God,
Be basely bartered in a Christian land?
Can liberty be bought for gold?
Great God, can man pretend to keep thy law,
And take thy Holy Word for his guide,
And know no more of Nature's wise decrees?
Can he be so debased as e'en to think
That Thou createdst man, and him decreed
In galling chains to spend his weary days?
Say, why has man a soul, if formed for naught,
For horrid fetters and a beastly doom?
Fancy aught starts; methinks I hear,
In the low murmur of the rolling tide,
And in the whispering of the evening breeze,
Heart-rendering peals of more than earthly sound
Come floating on the air. Oh! hear ye not
The cry of Africa's sons in deep distress?
Ah! Christian friends, hear their cries,
And see the fond mother's agonizing grief—
Hear the deep sounds, all tremulous with woe!
Look now, thou boasted Christian, and behold,
By mental agony, the frame distort,
With features writhed, and looks of wild despair.
Lo, now, with grief too deep for futile tears,
The sable mother lifts her hand to Heaven,
And to her God, and yokes, pours out her soul,
Ay, prays for death, the only hopeful cure.
Hark, now the harmless, hopeless infant hear;
Torn from his mother's arms, his piercing shrieks
Ascend to Heaven, and loudly speaking there,
Calls vengeance down on thy devoted head.
Think you, vain man, that cries and prayers
Like these,
Before the throne of Heaven, unanswered lie?
Believe it not; the Lord, all just and wise,
O'er all his works with his protecting arm,
Keeps strictest watch—nor will they call in vain
He will redress all wrong that ye have done
To Africa's sons, and on your guilty head Shall fall, or soon or late, just punishment.
Ye fair of Heav'nly lands, oh, envy not—
And ye of savage nations, fiercely not—
Ah! envy not the daughters of our land,
Where griefs of unknown depth perpetual flow;
Where boasted liberty is chained forth,
And haggard slavery's notes commingled rise.
Hear ye the clanking sound of fettered feet!
In Freedom's east, what harsh discordance this:
Awake, Columbia! from lethargy, arise—Wipe from the deep-stained brow the shade of guilt:
No longer let reproach from foreign lands
Be hurled and justly at thy boasted name.
Come out with good intent, the fetters break,
And scatter every pinion to the wind.
Free the oppress'd, and make thy bounty known
To all who now the yoke of bondage wear.
Then shall thou rise to thy exalted place,
Free from reproach; and then shall the earth
Be filled with glory.
Row down to Tave and glad with one consent,
And Thy holy name rever

1776.

Men to the plow,
Wife to the cow,
Girls to the yarn,
Boys to the barn,
And all dues settled.

1830

Men a mere show,
Girls, Piano,
Wives, silk and satin,
Boys, Greek and Latin,
And all hands gazed.

1857

Men all in debt,
Wives in a pot,
Boys, tobacco squirts,
Girls, dragging skirts,
And everybody cheated.

What Makes a Man.

A truthful soul, a loving mind,
Full of affection for its kind,
A helper of the human race,
A soul of beauty and of grace;
A spirit firm, erect and free,
That never basely bends the knee;
That will not bear a feather's weight,
Of slavery's chain, for small or great;
That truly speaks of God within,
And never makes a league with sin;
That snags the fetters despots make,
And loves the truth for its own sake;
That worships God and Him alone,
And bows nowhere but at His throne;
That trembles at no tyrant's nod—
A soul that fears no one but God,
And thus can smile at curse and ban;
That is the soul that makes the man.

Anecdotes.

At an examination of a bankrupt, it was observed that he kept a great number of banking accounts.

I see, said the judge, that you have had six or seven bankrupts—what could you want so many for?

To overdraw them, to be sure, was the frank reply.

A sick glutton said to a doctor, I've lost my appetite.

All the better, said the doctor; you'll be sure to die if you recover it.

Am not a little pale? inquired a lady, who was short and corpulent, of a crusty old bachelor.

You look more like a big tub, was the blunt reply.

THE SECRET INFIRMITIES OF YOUTH AND MATURITY.
Just Published, Gratis, the 25th Thousand.
A FEW words on the rational treatment with Aid of Medicine, of Spermatocoria or Local Acne, Venereal, Nosturnal Emission, Genital and Nervous Debility, Premature Decay of the System, Impotency, and Impediments to Marriage generally, by B. DELANEY, M. D.

The important fact that the many alarming complaints, originating in the impudence and solitude of youth, may be easily removed without Medicine, is in this small tract, clearly demonstrated; and the entirely new and highly successful treatment, as adopted by the Author, fully explained, by means of which every one is enabled to cure himself perfectly at the least possible cost, thereby avoiding all the advertised nostruments of the day.

Pure Potash
IN TIN CANS.
B. T. BABBITT,
68 & 70 Washington street, N. Y.,
And 28 India street, Boston.

THE Proprietor of this POTASH has for many years been the possessor of having some reliable standard for the strength of POT-ASH. The adulteration has become so general,
that it has, notwithstanding its valuable properties, gone nearly out of use. The Proprietor has taken the responsibility of subscribing his name
to every package, and warrants the strength to be a certain, and when used always producing the same results. Potash many times is adulterated
with salt, which is destructive in making soap;
it makes the Ladies say they did not have good luck, &c. One other reason that Potash has gone out of use, is, it is so unpleasant to handle, being put in wooden casks, and becoming a liquid
in many cases, and very troublesome to the retailers.

Now the Proprietor first obtains pure Potashes,
always being the same strength, and producing
the same results; and will warrant it in all cases,
if the directions are followed, to produce double the effect in making soaps, and all other purposes for which Potash is used, will find directions for making the best of Soft, Hard, or Savery Soaps. It is made with little trouble; the ley is all prepared in five or ten minutes.

1 lb. Potash warranted to cut 5 lbs. of grease
into good soap.
12 lbs. will make one barrel of beautiful soft soap.

Directions for making soft soap.
Directions for making hard soap.
Directions for Laundries and Hotels.
Directions for cleaning cotton Waste that has been used for cleaning machinery of all kinds.
Directions for using this Potash in place of Sal Soda.

Directions for sticking India-rubber soles on Shoes.
All the above directions accompany the can.

B. T. BABBITT'S
BEST SALERATUS,
IS prepared entirely different from other saleratus. All the deleterious matter extracted in such a manner as to produce Bread, Biscuit, and all kinds of Cake, without containing a particle
of saleratus when the bread or cake is baked;
thereby producing wholesome results. Every particle of Saleratus is turned to Gas and passes
through the bread or biscuit while baking, consequently nothing remains but Common Salt, Water and Flour. You will readily perceive by the taste of this Saleratus that it is entirely different from other Saleratus. When you purchase one paper you should take the old paper with you, and be very particular and get the next exactly like
the first, (name and picture, twisted. Lead-bread, with a glass of refreshing water on the top, as you see in the left).

Full directions for making Bread with Sour
Milk and Cream, and all kinds of Pastry;
also for making Soda Water; also, directions for making Seidlitz Powders, will accompany each package.

Ball's Great SCROFULA REMEDY.

THIS Purely Vegetable Preparation is pleasant
and agreeable to the taste, and simple in its action, causing neither vomiting nor purging. It acts directly upon the primary cause of disease.
It regulates the Bowels, remove all vitiated secretions, giving a healthy action to the Liver and a correct tone to the Stomach. It overcomes the feeling of Languor which is often experienced in the Spring and Summer, and renovates and restores the vital energy and Physical Strength.

In thousands of cases of Scrofula and Scrofu-
lous Humors, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas,
Scald Head, Tumors, Ulcers, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Inflammatory Rheumatism, Fever, Sores, White Swelling, Dropsy, Boils, Barber's Itch, Piles, Old Sores, and all diseases which manifest themselves by Eczema or Eruptions on the Skin, it has been used with the most gratifying success, after every other known remedy has been tried and failed to afford relief.

It is also an effective cure for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Constiveness and Derangement of the Urinary Organs.
It is an infallible remedy for irregularities and
other diseases peculiar to FEMALES, such as Weakness and Pain in the Back, Strangury, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart,
Dizziness and Headache.

It can be given with perfect safety and most desirable results in all cases, to any person from infancy to old age.

COMPLETE
Dental Establishment.

DRS. CUMMINGS & FLAGG,
SURGEON DENTISTS.

25 Tremont Street, (up stairs,) Boston.

DRS. C. & F., having had extensive experience in every branch of practical and scientific Dentistry, and being conversant with the best known methods and latest improvements in the profession, feel qualified to perform all operations in a manner highly satisfactory to patients,
and reflecting credit upon themselves.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH. By the improved principle of Atmospheric Pressure, teeth, from one to an entire set, are inserted firmly and beautifully, without the use of springs or clasps. Many beautiful specimens of Plate work, on gold, silver and platinum, are on exhibition at our Rooms, which, for taste, style and durability, we believe cannot be surpassed.

EXTRACTING TEETH. In this important
and difficult branch of the profession, great care
is taken to render the operation the least painful. By the application of a hemming agent to the gum, the operation is performed with comparatively little pain. This new process of extracting teeth has been in use nearly two years,
and we feel confident in recommending it to our patrons and the public, as lessening in a great measure the dread which has heretofore existed,
of dental operations. In some cases it entirely removes pain, while, in almost all instances, it does much to contribute to the comfort of patients. The application of ether, which is entirely painless, is administered to those who desire it.

FILLING TEETH. This is the most difficult operation the dental practitioner is ever called upon to perform. It often-times baffles the skill of operators who have been in practice
many years. It is also, when well performed,
the most certain and only remedy that can be applied for the cure of decayed teeth. But, to be effective, it must be executed in the most thorough and perfect manner. The preservation of a tooth, when well filled, and with suitable
material, if it be afterwards kept constantly
clean, may be regarded as certain. At any rate, it will never again be attacked in the same place by disease.

By the use of the new preparation of Crysta
Gold, teeth are not only arrested from decay, and partially saved, but veritably restored to the form, comfort and utility of the original structure. By a wonderful property of gold, the metal, in its crystalline or precipitated state, by peculiar manipulation, passes from a pulverulent to a cohesive and solid mass, the same as com.
By virtue of this remarkable property, it is made to fill the cavity of a tooth, and even to restore its shape, as substantially as if it were cast.

The proprietors of this complete dental establishment will always be pleased to give their advice on the care and preservation of the teeth of children and adults, and the result of their long experience in cases requiring the opinion of practical scientific dentists.
